Wife and Baby Found Buried; Mate Is Seized

Murders Confessed, Police Report; Infant May Have Been Interred Alive

BULLETIN

Charles Francis Holober was arrested at 12:30 a. m. today in front of his home, 1216 Shepherd st. nw., on a warrant charging him with murder of his wife and their baby.

Police said he confessed.

A jewelry store clerk was sought for murder last night after the bodies of his wife and 8-month-old daughter, missing since Thursday, were found yesterday afternoon buried in a shallow grave near a Fairfax County nudist camp.

Two warrants for the arrest of Charles Francis Holober, 40, of 1216 Girard st. nw., were issued at 10:15 p. m. by Fairfax County police, one warrant for each victim.

The victims were Holober's estranged wife, Mrs. Frances Garner Holober, 37, of 931 New York ave., nw., and her daughter Joan.

Reported Pregnant

Mrs. Holober, said to have been pregnant, apparently had been beaten, and the baby may have been buried alive, police reported.

Fairfax County Coroner Nelson Podolnick pronounced the woman and child dead. He said the woman's head showed evidence of blows. She was found buried in approximately 6 inches of dirt, 6 miles north of Pender, Va., near the lodge of a nudist camp.

She was lying on her back, her undergarments pulled below her knees.

Shortly after, police discovered under the camp lodge a five-foot length of iron pipe stained with what appeared to be blood.

Dr. Podolnick said the baby, lying at her mother's feet, showed no signs of blows and may have been buried alive.

In answer to a request from Fairfax County police, the Metropolitan police homicide squad started looking for Holober shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday. They could not find him at his home on Girard st., which he shares with his sister, her husband, and his mother.

Expected Momentarily

Detectives were told Holober had left the house shortly after noon, but was expected back "momentarily."

The car in which he and his wife and child had become mired in Fairfax County, Wednesday, stood unlocked in front of the house, mud still caked on the rear wheels.

Detectives waited in the Holober home for three hours, and then left. Late last night, with Holober's whereabouts still unknown, a police lookout was broadcast.

He was described as "white, 40, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weight 160, brown hair, wears glasses, and wearing dark clothes."

Holober's father, Isadore, who

Miners Trapped Night in Shaft By Blaze Saved

Benton, Wis., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Fourteen shivering miners were hauled to safety early today from the bottom of a mine shaft where they spent a harrowing night with a fire raging overhead.

They were unhurt, but reported the night cold in the shaft was intense. To keep warm they huddled against mules stabled in an underground barn.

The men were trapped 168 feet beneath the surface of the Kittoe Co. lead and zinc mine, about 10:45 last night, when fire broke out in a derrick structure directly over the shaft.

The fire wrecked hoisting machinery, preventing their escape.

The fire was put out at 2:45 a. m. and an automobile tow truck was backed up to the shaft and a big bucket attached to its cable. The men were brought up two and three at a time.

Kenyon Dorm Fire Kills 2, Hurts 26

Gambier, Ohio, Feb. 27 (A.P.).—One student was killed jumping for a fire escape, another died of burns and 26 were injured today as fire destroyed a 122-year-old dormitory at Kenyon College.

Officials of the exclusive all-male school were fearful that the death toll might be higher. Six students still were unaccounted for tonight and, officials told a school meeting, "probably no more than two of them were away from the campus for the weekend."

Marc S. Peck, Fenton, Mich., died of burns tonight—nearly 14 hours after the blaze. Edward Brout, 20, a premedical student from Mount Vernon, N. Y., died trying to jump from a third-floor window to a second-story fire escape.

An estimated 100 students were routed from their beds by the blaze at 4 a. m.

Of the injured, 11 were hospitalized and 15 released after treat-

Lost Attorney Reported Safe In New Jersey

BULLETIN

The wife of Leon A. Ransom, missing attorney, said early this morning she learned her husband had been found in Union, N. J., apparently in good health. She said she received the news from a Dr. N. J. Watts of Union, who described himself as an old friend of Ransom.

Three separate threats were made against Leon A. Ransom in an hour-long union meeting Wednesday, the night before the 49-year-old lawyer disappeared, an eyewitness said yesterday.

The witness is John Parker, 60, of 1906 9th st. nw. Parker is represented by Ransom in his efforts to recover $400 back pay from Local 74 of the Hod Carriers and Building Labor Union.

Henry Thomas, 1368 Canal st. sw., union president, admitted that "an argument" between Ransom and others had occurred, but denied that the missing lawyer had been threatened.

Meanwhile, no trace of Ransom had been discovered by the Missing Persons Bureau or by his family.

Mrs. Ransom said yesterday at her home, 1512 Girard st. ne., she had heard nothing from her hus-

Daughter Marries And Mother Dies At Ceremony

Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 27.—Grace Cranton, 21, took her marriage vows today unaware that her mother collapsed and died of a heart seizure only a few feet away while watching the ceremony.

Miss Cranton's marriage to Robert Kimball, 24, proceeded without interruption when Mrs. Bertha Cranton, 51, suffered a fatal stroke while standing among other spectators in Grace Methodist Church.

Mrs. Cranton was carried quietly from the church after she pressed her hands to her chest and collapsed in the middle of the ceremony.

Moments after Kimball placed the wedding ring on her finger, however, the bride was shocked from joy to tears when relatives informed her of her mother's death.

'Atom Bomb' Fails to Halt Task Force

Simulated Attack 'Disables' Carrier Roosevelt But Others Continue in Action

Aboard the USS Pocono off Puerto Rico, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—The huge aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt was ruled knocked out of action temporarily and an escorting destroyer was declared sunk by a mock atomic bomb explosion today in the Navy's biggest peacetime war games.

"A few other" ships of the task force of three carriers and eight destroyers put under simulated A-bomb attack suffered "minor damage" but continued in action.

Dropping of the mock atomic bomb highlighted a day of intense activity in the record-size maneuvers being held in the Caribbean.

Air Force Not Participating

The Navy ran through the complex sham battle without the assistance of the U. S. Air Force, which turned down an invitation to participate.

Although Air Force headquarters in Washington gave no official reason for the decision to stay out of the maneuvers, a press relations officer pointed out that it is customary for one service to invite the others to take part in exercises. But, he said, the decision whether one service joins another's maneuvers usually is governed by several factors. These include budget limitations, availability of units, and whether the nature of the maneuvers is such as to provide desirable training for the participating service, he said.

Defenses Penetrated

A Navy two-engine, land-based P2V Neptune bomber made the simulated atomic bomb attack which Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander of the Atlantic Fleet, described as "very successful but not a catastrophe"—if it had been a live A-bomb.

Blandy was in charge of the Bikini atom bomb tests in 1946.

He said he thought it showed that a carrier task force could not be stopped from continuing its attacks by the explosion of one atomic bomb, "if it is on its toes."

Blandy said a flare dropped by the P2V to simulate the A-bomb lighted up to signify the explosion "several hundred" feet above and about 1500 yards to the rear of the F. D. R.

The A-bomb plane, along with two others of the same type and an escort of four two-engine Tigercat fighters, sneaked through the carrier task force's defenses and dropped the mock explosive from 21,000 feet at 2:08 p. m. local time.

The carriers' combat air patrol had been called down to 6000 feet five minutes earlier to intercept a flight of four four-engine Privateer bombers carrying "Bat" guided missiles.

The attacking planes also

Paper Says Clark Or Wedemeyer Will Replace Clay

Chicago, Feb. 27 (A.P.).—The Chicago Tribune said tonight it had learned "authoritatively" that Gen. Lucius D. Clay "will relinquish command of American forces in Europe by June 30." He will be replaced by Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer or Gen. Mark W. Clark, the dispatch said.

Wedemeyer is deputy chief of staff in charge of plans and operation, and Clark is commanding the Sixth Army with headquarters in San Francisco.

The Tribune said "the shift will mark a change in American policy from the Carthaginian hard peace policy toward Germany, under the Morgenthau plan, to a softer peace policy to emphasize American determination to halt the spread of Communism."

Round-the-World Trek

Refugees From China Pause Here on Long Road to Israel

The Washington Post

WONDERFUL!—On the "bonded" train crossing the U. S. are Abraham Frank, his wife (left) and his sister, Miss Lily Frank. Mr. and Mrs. Frank were wed January 27 and are spending "a wonderful" honeymoon in transit

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

More than 400 Jewish men, women and children—battered by wars and persecution—moved through Washington yesterday on their way from Shanghai to Israel.

They are completing a round-the-world trek begun by some of them as long as 30 years ago. Many were victims of both world wars, of Nazi persecution—and some also of the Bolsheviks, because of their White Russian allegiance.

When they left their homes in Russia, Poland, Germany and Austria, and somehow made their way to China, their only thought was to get away from where they had lived. Now, they are drawn as by a magnet to the nation which their people have built in Palestine.

"Back to Poland?" repeated 50-year-old, Polish-born Wolf Rubinstein, almost incredulously, when a reporter asked if he planned to find his home again. "Israel is my country."

Train Stops Here

Rubinstein was one of the displaced Jews on the special International Refugee Organization train which stopped in the Potomac Yards yesterday on its way to Jersey City.

Of the 489 Shanghai refugees on the "bonded" train, 445 chose Israel over their native lands as their destination, the IRO reported. Only a few, with children or other close ties in the United States, would like to stay in this country.

They left Shanghai on February 2 on the United States Army transport General Gordon.

Officials of the IRO, which arranges and pays for the refugees' transportation, were unable to send the group to Palestine by ship through the Indian Ocean and the Suez Canal, because of the Palestine war.

The refugees reached San Francisco and were loaded on a 20-car train. Because they are merely passing through the country and have no official status as visitors here, they have not been allowed

Reds Booing Churchill Talk Are Arrested

Brussels, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Heavily armed Belgian police today arrested at least 60 Communists, including six members of the National Assembly, during an organized Communist attempt to halt an outdoor speech by Winston Churchill.

The former British Prime Minister continued speaking during the disturbance, but he was forced to stop three times because of Communist hecklers.

Police and gendarmes, armed with tommyguns, pistols and truncheons, closed in on the booing, hissing Communists and hustled them off to jail. Some 800 police and 300 gendarmes were on hand. Extraordinary precautions had been taken against such an outburst.

Churchill and Belgian Premier Paul-Henri Spaak addressed the crowd of 15,000 in the Place de la Bourse on behalf of the European Movement, a crusade for European unity launched by Churchill and other political leaders in 1946.

When Churchill and Spaak arrived in front of the Stock Exchange they were greeted by a trumpet flourish from a Belgian army band, and a shower of Communist leaflets bearing such slogans as "They Want War!"

Churchill said that the European Movement is the "sole means of preventing another hideous war" and the only way to insure that "the broad shield of liberty and love can be spread over the working masses . . . the little people and the big."

Vandenberg, Connally Express Confidence; Wording Expected to Be Finished in Week

By Coleman B. Jones
NYHT News Service

Optimism over the outcome of North Atlantic security pact negotiations, now entering their concluding phase here, was disclosed yesterday by the chief Senate spokesmen on bi-partisan foreign policy.

More work on the actual wording of the treaty, under which all member-nations will be committed to recognize an attack on one as an act of aggression against all, remained to be done, but diplomats expected it to be completed this week.

Enough progress was made at a long drafting session of the seven negotiators Saturday to raise hope that another meeting today or Tuesday might bring completion of the document in sight.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who will have a leading part in advocating United States ratification of the treaty, said yesterday:

"I think we are on our way to a satisfactory and adequate result."

Connally Confident

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the committee, which will have to pass on the treaty before it is submitted to the Senate, expressed his optimism by indicating that he thought no further conferences between Secretary of State Acheson and members of his group would be necessary before the negotiations are concluded.

Foreign Relations committeemen impressed their views on Secretary Acheson at a closed conference 10 days ago and clarified the atmosphere for the negotiations somewhat during a subsequent discussion in the Senate.

At that time, Vandenberg emphasized that, while the Constitution requires that the United States reserve to itself "the entire right of decision" on use of military force if one of the allies is attacked, he believed that a declaration of this Nation's "community of interest" with the European democracies would provide "the best assurance against World War III."

That discussion appeared to contribute promptly toward dispelling European concern over lack of an "automatic" war clause in the projected treaty and to quiet congressional fears that such a commitment might be included in its language.

Since then, without disclosing details, Secretary Acheson and the representatives of Canada, Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—whose discussions had appeared to

Company Pays Workers to Put Negotiations Off

Decatur, Ill., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—A manufacturing firm succeeded today in getting its 1900 employes to accept an immediate $50 payment each in return for postponing contract wage negotiations until June 1, when economic trends may be clearer.

The A. E. Staley Manufacturing Co. made the proposal to the United Auto Workers (AFL) which bargains for the employes. Production and maintenance employes voted to accept the company's proposal. Franzy Eakin, company vice president, said that business conditions were too uncertain to commit the concern to higher wages over a long period, but that by next June the trends might be established. The union has demanded 20-cent hourly increases during negotiations the last six weeks.

Mayhew Right, Reports Hint

London, Feb. 27 (NYHT).—Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, was reported to have described in a speech in Scotland today the plight of Underscretary Christopher P. Mayhew as due to the fact that he "blurted out the truth at the wrong moment."

Mayhew at Lake Success last week indicated Britain had completed her postwar recovery. The implication, as seen by many Senators at Washington, was that Britain does not need further aid under the European Recovery Program.

Last night, Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, repudiated Mayhew's statement and said British recovery is dependent on further American aid.

McNeil reportedly said the Labor Government will issue figures in two or three weeks showing that "Britain has surprised even herself by how near she has come to balancing what she has to spend with what she has been able to earn."

Scandinavian Adherence to Pact Predicted

Diplomatic Sources See Sweden Joining Within Six Months

By Glenn Williams

Oslo, Norway, Feb. 27 (A.P.).—High diplomatic sources predict that all Scandinavia — including traditionally neutral Sweden—probably will join the proposed North Atlantic defense pact within six months.

Norway already has prepared to cast her lot with the West. Denmark's principal political party, the Social Democrats, only today called on that country to face west in the quest for military security.

A source close to Sweden's government speculated privately that Sweden will join the North Atlantic alliance by autumn or "sooner, if the Russians make any move toward Finland."

Swedish Prime Minister Tage Edlander told this correspondent his country's offer to back Scandinavian neighbors in their own strictly neutral mutual defense

6 Major Bakers Close Down as 1 Faces Strike

New York, Feb. 27 (A.P.).—Six major baking companies ceased operations today, a union said, in answer to the union's strike threat against one of the firms. The companies supply New York City with 70 per cent of its wrapped bread and cake.

Local 550 of the AFL teamsters had announced plans to strike at midnight against the Continental Baking Co., after negotiations to settle a wage dispute collapsed.

The five bakeries supporting Continental directed their employes not to report for work on their next scheduled shifts. Some 1500 drivers and about 6000 inside workers were involved.

Although holding to its strike threat, the union directed workers employed by the non-struck bakeries to report for work tomorrow. It termed the close-down a "lockout."

Filibuster Set Today; Perils Urgent Bills

Connally, George To Open Dixie Fight Aimed at Balking Civil Rights Drive

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

A serious pile-up of major domestic and foreign policy legislation on which early action is rated as urgent is threatened by plans of Southern Senators to start a full-scale filibuster today against a resolution designed to check future lengthy Senate talkfests.

With an almost solid front of Deep South Senators prepared to talk at length against the resolution, which jeopardizes their chances to defeat administration civil rights legislation, it was estimated that a month would be needed to wear down the Dixie opposition if Administration leaders are determined to make an unswerving effort to adopt the anti-filibuster rule.

Part of that time would have to be devoted to continuous day and night sessions, many Senators feel.

To Start It Today

The leader of the Southern group, Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) announced that Senators Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and Walter F. George (D., Ga.) would start the filibuster today. He said the Dixie delegation would object to granting many Senate committees permission to hold sessions while the Senate is meeting because "we want members there to hear our arguments."

Administration leaders said yesterday that a one-month bite out of the working time of the Eighty-first Congress during this period would jeopardize the following:

1. Extension of the Rent Control Act, which expires March 31.
2. Action on the Economic Cooperation Administration's request for $1,378,000,000 to tide it over the period from April 3, when its funds will be exhausted, and the start of the new fiscal year on July 1.
3. Extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, which expires June 30, by early April so the Administration will be in a

$40,000 Disappears From Coffers of Columbia Hospital

Disappearance of approximately $40,000 in the funds of the Columbia Hospital for Women through allegedly faulty bookkeeping, was disclosed yesterday by Sidney L. Hechinger, assistant treasurer.

The loss was discovered six weeks ago, Hechinger said, and the hospital referred the matter to the United States Attorney's office.

Hechinger said the loss, part of which is covered by bond, was discovered after the hospital's books were audited in January. A hospital bookkeeper was discharged in December, Hechinger said. He declined to identify the fired employe pending further investigation by the United States attorney.

The financial footing of the organization will not be impaired as a result of the missing funds, Hechinger emphasized, although he described the loss as "tough to take."

Far-Reaching Reorganization Of Treasury Reported Studied

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Hoover Commission is reported to be working on a proposed reorganization of the Treasury Department which would have a far-reaching effect on Treasury employes as well as those in other Federal agencies. The plan, subject to change, is along these lines:

1. That the Bureau of Narcotics be transferred to the Justice Department;

2. That the United States Coast Guard plus the marine activities of Bureau of Customs be transferred to the Commerce Department;

3. That the Bureau of Federal Supply be absorbed in the proposed new Office of General Services;

4. That the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation all be transferred to the Treasury Department and be placed under the supervision of its Secretary;

5. That the Home Owners Loan Corporation, Defense Homes Corporation and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation among several similar lending agencies be transferred to and liquidated by the Treasury Department;

6. That the Customs Bureau be merged with the Bureau of Internal Revenue into a revenue service, and finally,

7. That all of the Government's domestic financial and lending agencies, such as Federal Reserve, Farm Credit, RFC, Federal Housing, Public Housing, etc., be made members of a new financial council whose chairman would be the Treasury Secretary. It would be the duty of the council to lay down the Government domestic credit policies. It would have the effect, of course, of making Treasury the center of the Government financial operations.

On the other hand, the Hoover group is said to have rejected flatly a recommendation of a "task force" that the Budget Bureau be

McClellan Would Limit Reorganization Time

By the United Press

Chairman John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) of the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee said yesterday he would try to put a four-year time limit on legislation giving President Truman power to reorganize the executive branch of the Government.

He also said he would try to write in an exemption for the Army Engineers. McClellan's committee begins closed-door consideration of the House-approved reorganization bill today.

Dismissals Stir Professors To Ask Freedom in Opinions

An appeal for academic freedom was sounded by the American Association of University Professors here yesterday under impetus of recent dismissals of college professors for allegedly maintaining unorthodox political and scientific views.

More than 250 members of the American Association of University Professors, meeting at the Hotel Statler in their thirty-fifth annual convention, took these actions:

1. They passed a resolution declaring that teachers must be free to accept or discard scientific theories championed by some governments.

2. The association's Committee on Academic Freedom and Tenure announced an investigation into complaints by eight AAUP members that they had been fired for openly supporting Henry A. Wallace for the presidency.

3. W. T. Laprade, Duke University history professor, and chairman of the academic freedom committee, also announced an investigation into the recent discharge of three University of Washington faculty members accused of past or present membership in the Communist Party.

The academic freedom committee's report also said in part:

"The Association must always defend the exercise of freedom by members of the profession when it is challenged, even though the speakers or writers favor unpopular views held by a small minority. The only way to have freedom is for society to acquiesce in its practice and to guard jealously the right to practice it by individuals acting lawfully according to their convictions.

"Defenders of the status quo, especially in our time and in our land, need desperately to have faith that which they seek to de-

'Servants of Brotherhood'

Pearson Puts New Meaning On That 'S.O.B.' From Truman

Columnist Drew Pearson, on the radio last night, proposed to give President Truman's "S. O. B." remark a new meaning and urged the President to join him in a new order entitled "Servants of Brotherhood."

Mr. Truman said last week he wasn't going to let "any S. O. B." tell him whom he can have on his staff or in his Cabinet. He referred particularly to criticism of his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan. Pearson had attacked Vaughan for accepting a medal from Argentina.

Pearson said the President "called me a name not exactly brotherly" during "Brotherhood Week."

"I'm going to use them (the initials) proudly," Pearson said, "to mean Servants of Brotherhood. I propose to form a new militant order of servants of freedom at home and abroad."

"I am sure, Mr. President, that you will approve and join," he said. "The President must be not only a dignified leader of this country but the father of the world."

Pearson said Argentine "Dictator" Juan D. Peron is "angling" for a $500,000,000 loan and President Truman reportedly has privately approved it.

"If that loan goes through, I predict that Vaughan's medal will be the most expensive ever received and will prove that George Washington was right when he banned the acceptance of foreign medals by Government representatives," Pearson said.

(Mr. Truman said that Vaughan's medal will remain in the custody of the State Department until Congress decides whether to let him keep it.)

Pearson said he still endorses Mr. Truman's program, but reserves the right to criticize the President if he makes "unwise" appointments.

Peace Conference Set, Chinese Told

Nanking, (Monday) Feb. 28. (U.P.) The official Central News Agency today announced that a peace conference between the Communists and Nationalists well begin "next month."

The agency said the Reds already are selecting delegates.

The report it believed based on information given official circles by members of the unofficial, Shanghai delegation.

The mission, which laid the foundation for a peace conference in talks with the Communist high command, reported hopes for ending China's civil war are "very high."

The peace mission returned to Nanking yesterday from North China where it conferred with Communist leaders including Mao Tze-Tung and Gen. Chou En-Lai. The mission warned, however, that "we still face many difficulties."

The group was headed by W. W. Yen, veteran diplomat who was once ambassador to Moscow. With it was Shao Li-Tze, member of the Nationalist peace negotiating team, the "grand old man of peace" who also served as ambassador to Moscow.

Air Strength In Japan to Be Kept as It Is

By The Associated Press

The Air Force plans to rely on its present strength in Japan, built around a B-29 group with fighter support.

An Air Force official said last night, in answer to questions, that he expects the USAF to continue, as the Army has announced it is doing, the existing strength in the Far East, neither increasing or cutting it substantially.

Under the proposed military appropriations for the fiscal year beginning next July, the Air Force will have a total manpower strength of 412,000. (Its present strength is about 417,000). President Truman recommended that the Air Force combat fleet be fixed at 48 groups, as against the 59 now in operation.

However, a reduction in groups is not expected to affect the Far East force.

USAF unit strength in Japan has been reduced slightly during the past year.

A year ago two B-29 groups were stationed in the Far East, operating from bases in Guam to Japan and other areas under American control. One group was returned to the United States last fall. Other B-29 groups make occasional training visits to the Western Pacific areas, remaining there several months and thus augmenting the bombardment force.

In addition to the B-29 medium bomber group of about 30 planes, two light bomber groups (about 45 plans per group) are in the Far East.

The Air Force presently has six fighter groups in the area, a reduction of one group from a year ago. A fighter group consists of approximately 75 planes.

There is no immediate indication of a change in Air Force strength in Europe.

Since last summer, three B-29 groups have been present in England.

Foreign Correspondents Barred in Peiping

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The Communist radio said today that foreign correspondents in Peiping would no longer be permitted to gather and transmit news.

It was not certain whether the correspondents would be allowed to move elsewhere. The broadcast did not mention earlier regulations banning the departure and entry of foreign nationals in Red territory.

Communist authorities in Peiping said foreign nationals would not be allowed to publish newspapers or magazines in the city and the Reds asked the United States Information Service to stop distributing news there.

The broadcast listed 17 correspondents for foreign news agencies, newspapers and magazines known to be in Peiping.

Siam Military Strife Reported

Manila (Monday), Feb. 28 (AP).—Reports of fighting between elements of the Siamese army and navy near Bangkok Sunday were received today by Manila sources.

A Pan American Clipper en route to Bangkok was forced to return to Manila late yesterday because the Bangkok airport was closed temporarily. It was reported the airport was reopened later.

Reports said trouble broke out when two sailors or marines were shot and that fighting developed in the countryside near the capital.

Another message said a civil disturbance had ended with the army remaining loyal to Premier Phibun Songgram.

Sultan Backs Dutch Plan

Batavia, Java, Feb. 27 (AP).—Leaders of non-Republican Indonesian states said today they "warmly received" a new Dutch plan to settle the Indonesian conflict. The states are Dutch-sponsored.

Reaction of the Republican leaders still is not known. They are to be freed from Dutch custody under the plan announced yesterday in The Hague. Doubt has been expressed that the Republicans will fall in with the Dutch plan unless its aims are clarified.

Hamid II, Sultan of West Borneo, congratulated the Netherlands government on its decision to call a roundtable conference at The Hague March 12.

Refugees Move in Steady Flow To West Zones, Germans Say

Hundreds of Europeans are "daily flowing" into western Germany from Communist-dominated areas, two German coworkers of Miss Mildred (Axis Sally) Gillars said in an interview here yesterday.

The two—Miss Ria Kloss, 31, and Erwin Christiani, 44—arrived in Washington Saturday night to testify this week in Miss Gillars' behalf. Axis Sally's trial continues today at District Court.

"Germany's big problem today," commented Christiani, "is how to provide employment for the now almost 12 million refugees who have migrated into the allied zones of our country to escape Russian persecution—and they are still coming in by the hundreds every day."

He said those living in the Russian zones are "faced with imminent starvation," and are showing the strain of their struggle since the war ended.

Christiani, himself unemployed since last October, lives with his wife and two young daughters in the town of Holzminden whose prewar population of 13,000 has risen to 23,000.

The daily food situation in the British zone where Christiani lives is "only fair," he said. "The important things are plentiful—bread and potatoes—but fats, meats, especially pork, are still in extremely short supply."

He said his 4½-year-old daughter hasn't yet seen a ham.

High taxes on industry, tripling of coal prices over prewar level, and the inability of expensive German products to compete successfully in the world market, were given as the chief reasons for Germany's economic crisis by the new arrivals.

Both the German witnesses emphasized the "encouraging" effect of the Berlin airlift, not only in Berlin but throughout western Germany.

Christiani, a radio technician and radio operator, said he was ordered by his military commanding officer to set up the technical facilities of the "Sender Bremen" radio station in Berlin. It was in this capacity that he came in contact with Miss Gilars, he explained.

Miss Kloss, a diminutive, reddish blonde woman, said she did radio broadcasts over the same station with Axis Sally during the early war period. Miss Kloss now works as an interpreter for the American military government in Germany.

Army Lines Up Behind Coup In Paraguay

Asuncion, Paraguay, Feb. 27 (AP). Army units threw their support today to a bloodless revolution which deposed President Raimundo Rolou while most of his cabinet was attending a wake last night.

Felipe Molas Lopez, who was Rolon's Minister of Education, took over the Presidency, marking the sixth successful revolution in 13 months and the second in four weeks in this turbulent country.

The revolutionary group forced Rolon's resignation while members of the cabinet and large numbers of the people of Asuncion were attending the wake for Archbishop Juan Sinforiano Bogarin, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Paraguay, who died Friday.

First inkling was a broadcast announcing Rolon's removal because he "failed properly to carry out his duties."

Rolon himself seized power in a bloodless revolution January 30, which deposed President J. Natalicio Gonzalez.

The Paraguay army's First Cavalry Division at Campo Grande, just outside Asuncion, and an artillery regiment at Paraguari, also near the capital, threw support to the new revolutionary government.

Just when the military entered the coup was not clear. The uprising was described in the official broadcast last night as a civil movement, but leaders of the two military units said today they also are participating.

Rescue Attempt Set Today for 3 On Alaskan Isle

Cordova, Alaska, Feb. 27 (U.P.). Three persons stranded on a tiny island near here were reported safe and in good condition tonight by crewmen of a Coast Guard flying boat which dropped a walkie-talkie radio set to them.

Coast Guard officers said the plane also dropped instructions telling the trio where to make contact with a rescue boat that will attempt to take them aboard Monday during high tide.

The two men and a woman had been marooned on Grass Island for six days after their barge, the North Cloud, ran aground. High winds and swirling ice floes had beaten back repeated efforts to rescue them.

Last midnight a flood tide nearly inundated the tiny island.

The three are Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Howard, owners of the barge, and their son-in-law, Robert Zentimer. A fourth member of the crew, Leonard Holeman, arrived on the Alaskan mainland Tuesday after walking 30 miles across ice floes.

Capehart Would Cut ECA by Half

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) said tonight he will demand that Congress slice the proposed six-billion-dollar European Recovery Appropriation in half.

"I will offer an amendment calling for a cut of perhaps three billion dollars in the ECA appropriation," he said, "and I also expect to introduce amendments to domestic budget items which will call for cuts in every major expenditure except those necessary to meet veterans' benefits and the costs attached to the national debt."

Senator Capehart's statement was made in an address on "Report to the People," a radio program broadcast by Station WMAQ, Chicago.

He said he believes the Nation's economy cannot stand proposed ECA expenditures in addition to a European armament program, expansion of welfare benefits and the present level of Government costs.

European aid can stand reduction, he said, because production in ERP countries has in some instances reached or surpassed prewar levels and future plans for ECA are to lower European production costs so those countries can compete in world markets.

"Our money will be used to cut their costs so they can compete with our goods on the world market. Our manfacturers and labor cannot compete with European cheap labor costs," he said.

"I want to ask the American people and the Congress this question: Are we under any obligation to help European nations to a position beyond that which they were enjoying before the war?"

Senator Capehart repeated his position taken last week that would favor using a portion of the ECA funds to meet the cost of European armaments in the event such a program is necessary under the North Atlantic Pact.

American Shipments of Coal To Europe Drop in January

Economic Situation In West Germany Held Encouraging

By the United Press

An optimistic picture of the economic situation in bizonal Germany was painted yesterday by the Commerce Department.

The European branch of the department's Office of International Trade told of "striking economic advances" in 1948, and predicted even better things for this year.

By the end of December, they said, production in the United States and British zones of Germany had climbed to 78 per cent of the 1936 level, exports doubled those of 1947, and a good harvest was providing better food for Germans.

"The immediate motivating factor in this recovery was the currency reform which set in motion a whole series of favorable factors," the report said. "For the first time since the Allied occupation, industry was given an economic incentive to produce."

Coal production, while it did not increase spectacularly, rose to one ton per man-shift, or near the figure for England. It still was far below modern, mechanized averages of more than six tons per man-shift in the United States, however.

The largest increases registered during 1948 were in production of iron and steel, nonferrous metals, vehicles, electrical equipment and building materials. Consumer goods production rose less rapidly.

One of the big stumbling blocks to a better economy is electric output, the report said. The present level is about one-third above the prewar level, but needs have increased even faster.

"To limit consumption, residential service is shut off at peak periods throughout the day in heavily industrialized areas," the report said. "Industry is suffering from these cuts, but the situation is not likely to improve without considerable improvement in use of existing production facilities."

Increasing Output Of Most Mine Areas Abroad Are Cited

Geneva, Switzerland (Monday), Feb. 28 (AP).—The United States shipped less coal to Europe in January than in any month since the end of the war, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe reported today.

Monthly statistics published by the commission showed increasing production in all major European coal-mining areas, except Britain and Belgium.

Three countries, Germany, Poland and Belgium, had more men employed in their coal mines than ever before, and the employment total for the British mines was higher than at any time since the war.

American coal shipments to Europe totaled 631,000 metric tons during January, nearly 200,000 tons less than during the previous month and 1,700,000 tons less than in January, 1948. United States coal exports to Europe went exclusively to European Recovery Program countries. Most of those countries are increasing their own production or their imports from European sources.

During December Britain for the first time since the war supplied more coal to Europe than the United States.

Coal production in the Ruhr area set a new postwar record with a total of 8,204,000 tons, an increase of 1,600,000 tons over January, 1948.

Chinese Reds Admit Seizure of ECA Flour

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Chinese Communist Radio today acknowledged Red seizure of 6660 bags of Economic Cooperation Administration flour in Peiping February 18, but said the flour was Chinese government property.

The broadcast said the flour was listed on the inventory by the Nationalist "Council for American Aid" of items to be handed over to the Peiping military control committee.

30,000 Killed in Burma War, Premier Says, Asking Support

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 27 (AP).—Premier Thakin Nu declared today a year of rebellion in Burma has taken a toll of 30,000 lives. In money, he added, it has cost nearly 64 million dollars.

Speaking to 10,000 Burmese here, he demanded an end to the terror which he said has reduced the country to such poverty that financial aid from abroad is necessary.

Ever since Burma became independent of Britain 14 months ago, she has been fighting Communists, Karens and other rebels. Today, the Premier called upon his listeners to back him in his efforts to restore law and order and so enable scheduled elections to take place beginning March 23.

In New Delhi Monday, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Australia and Britain are to meet informally to consider what to do about the situation in Burma. A foreign ministry spokesman in New Delhi said India was thinking of offering a loan or meditation but that armed intervention was not even considered.

A big battle appeared to be developing in central Burma. Government forces mounted a counter-offensive aimed at recapturing Meiktila and the rail junction of Thazi from Karen rebels.

The Karens hit hard at government-held positions in Henzada, 80 miles northwest of Rangoon. A government communique said the rebels were beaten off with heavy losses.

Reds Give Warning To German Clergy

When Allies Leave

Austria Red Coup Plot Reported

Vienna, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Reliable intelligence sources asserted today that the Communists were making "feverish" preparations for an attempted coup when Allied occupation troops withdraw from Austria after the signing of a peace treaty.

Informants said there was evidence that the Communists had recruited several key party members who were to lead attacks on essential government buildings, and try to occupy them, as part of a detailed plan.

Training of an estimated 17,000 Communist "assault groups" has been stepped up at the same time, it was added.

Informants said that at a meeting Tuesday, with practically all party members present, including Heinrich Duermeyer, "security forces chief," the Communist leadership drafted a plan "which in great detail provides for Communist seizure of power to be enacted on the withdrawal of occupation troops."

Vienna's police force is armed with 2400 guns of 153 different makes, each make requiring different ammunition, informants said. Russia has blocked every attempt at uniform arming of the police.

Berlin, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Churchmen in the Soviet zone of Germany have been warned that Russian occupying authorities may take "precautionary measures" if the church doesn't give greater support to the "achievements" of the Communist regime.

The warning was contained in a recent issue of the official Red Army newspaper Taegliche Rundschau. The newspaper severely criticized both Catholic priests and Lutheran ministers for lack of enthusiasm for the Communists' nationalization, land reform and industrial production programs.

The paper said "precautionary measures" will be necessary unless churchmen prove more tractable.

It was one of the few published attacks on Soviet zone churches, although a whole series of measures sharply restricting religious freedom there have been taken.

The Communists have aimed primarily at religious youth training. All church youth organizations are banned in the Soviet zone. The only youth group allowed to function is the "Free German Youth" group, a junior Communist party.

Officially, religious instruction in schools is still allowed. But such training classes can only be held one hour after students are dismissed from normal classes. This means most students go home long before religious instruction starts.

In Brandenburg Province, all religious training in schools has been stopped by an official decree banning priests and ministers from classrooms.

Women's church organizations are banned throughout the zone.

The Communist regime does not allow churches to collect tithes, and most church-owned land has been confiscated under Communist land reform measures.

Despite Communist oppression, churchmen here say religious activity is still strong throughout the zone, and few people have left the church.

Guilty Verdict Seen in Trial Of Churchmen

By Edward M. Korry

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—A government spokesman today predicted speedy conviction of 15 leading Bulgarian Protestant churchmen on trial for their lives charged with espionage, treason and black marketing.

The trial, he forecast, will be concluded a week from Wednesday at the latest, with the sentencing of the defendants by the three-man court.

All defendants face a possible death penalty for espionage.

At the start of the trial the court enjoined the churchmen to "confess fully and frankly" in order to gain clemency.

The first three, who testified Friday and Saturday, did so. It is indicated the rest will do likewise, and therefore it is believed unlikely the death penalty will be invoked.

The 12 remaining defendants will start their testimony Monday.

Georgi Nicolov Chernev, head of the Pentacostal Churches of Bulgaria, and last of the leading defendants, will be called when court opens.

Chernev's pretrial confession ran 246 pages.

Tories Voice Dissatisfaction With Churchill

By Robert Hewett

London, Feb. 27 (AP).—Some of Britain's worried Conservative leaders are talking privately about easing Winston Churchill out of his role as the party's prime policy maker.

The Conservative defeat this week in the crucial South Hammersmith Commons by-election was a hard blow to party leaders. In backstage post mortems, insiders say, there is a rising demand for a drastic shakeup in Conservative campaign strategy before next year's general elections.

Tory tactics in 31 by-elections (special elections to fill Commons vacancies) have failed to win back a single district carried by Labor in 1945.

Churchill's threat to seek a vote of censure against the Labor government over soaring costs of the popular national health service was described by many as a pre-election blunder that lost votes in Hammersmith.

Second-guessing Conservatives have also criticized Churchill for his campaign speeches in Hammersmith—a departure from his practice of remaining aloof from by-elections. Some claimed his slashing attack on the Labor government failed to outline constructive counterproposals.

The 75-year-old Churchill is still the party's unchallenged No. 1 figure.

But can he draw the middle class and working class votes?

"They cheer for Churchill but they vote for Labor," was the private comment of one upper-level Conservative official recently.

The undercurrent of criticism broke into print, significantly, in Lord Rothermere's conservative Daily Telegraph.

The Telegraph's political correspondent said there is "serious unrest among Conservative members of Parliament. The Telegraph editorially urged a "chief of staff" for Churchill to draft parliamentary and election strategy.

489 Jewish Refugees Travel Through D. C. on Bonded Train

EN ROUTE—Watson B. Miller, U. S. Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, greets Morris Rubinstein, one of the more than 400 war refugees traveling across the U. S. on their way to Israel. Rubinstein, originally a Pole, was captured by the Germans in 1917. In 1935 he fled to Shanghai. Now with wife and son, he is going to the promised land

STOPOVER—During a brief stopover in Potomac Yards while their train was serviced, two of the war refugees passing across the U. S. pose for the photographer. They are Mrs. Naum Senderoff (left) and Mrs. Philip Frank. Mrs. Frank and her husband fled Russia during the Bolshevik revolution and settled in Shanghai. Their son and daughter are now with them to leave the train since they boarded it five days ago.

Today, they will be sent to Ellis Island in New York Harbor to await another Army transport, the General Stewart, which will sail Thursday and take them to Genoa, Italy. From there they will be taken to Israel, or to their native countries, in the case of the 40-odd being repatriated.

Forty-five of the refugees were under 14 years of age, about 90 were over 60, United Jewsih Appeal representatives said. A staff of one doctor, one nurse and three social workers, supplied by the Appeal, cared for the seven stretcher cases aboard, the seven infants under one year—and the baby born on the General Gordon in the Pacific.

While many could speak English, at least five other languages were used by the group on the transcontinental trip, the passengers said. They included Polish, Russian, Yiddish, German and Chinese.

As Jewish agency officials and railroad special agents on the train told the passengers they could not talk to reporters, few were able to come to car platforms to express their feelings, but most waved and smiled their happiness through the car windows.

MR. AND MRS ARNOLD BENNIGSON

There was one refugee, however, who made his way to a platform regardless. He was M. J. Leibson, 56-year-old native of Kiev, Russia, and he had someone to meet him in the Potomac Yards while railroad crews serviced the train.

Meeting him was his uncle, the Rev. Abraham Leibsohn of 1371 Peabody st. nw.—whom he had not seen since he was 4 years old. Mr. Leibsohn of the B'nai Israel Synagogue, wept with joy as he grasped his nephew and told him he remembered him as a little boy at his wedding in Kiev.

The uncle left Russia shortly afterward and came to the United States, and Leibsohn married, later fleeing to Shanghai with his wife during the revolution. A son born in Shanghai reached this country before the recent war, and Mr. and Mrs. Leibsohn hope eventually they can join him in New York, if they can obtain the necessary papers.

Parents Poles, Son German

Another couple on the train separated from a son by fate and international boundary changes were Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Bennigson. The section of Poland where they lived became part of Germany after the first World War, and their son was born a German citizen, though they retained their Polish nationality.

They were able to send their son, now 15, to this country under the German quota, Bennigson explained, but they have tried unsuccessfully for three years to join him.

"We must wait to enter under the Polish quota," he said. "The whole train is full of such accidents."

Tear Gas Gives Carnival Parade Weepy Windup

Milan, Italy, Feb. 27 (AP).—Fancy dress paraders ran into clouds of tear gas the police had just used to break up a Communist-led partisan demonstration today.

The partisans had chosen this pre-Lenten carnival day for demonstrations against what they termed the government's leniency to Fascists.

Thousands of spectators who came to be amused by carnival buffoonery stayed to weep when the tear gas reached them.

The trouble arose when the partisans tried to parade without police permission.

A shower of stones flew when the police tried to halt the march. Police replied with tear gas and swung rubber truncheons.

Turkey Says Russians Kidnaped Mayor

Istanbul, Turkey, Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Turkish authorities charged today that the Russian coast guard had kidnaped a Turkish village mayor and a group of friends who were in a fishing boat on the Black Sea. The Turks demanded their immediate release.

Newspapers speculated that the Russians might accuse the Turks of spying on coastal installations.

Soviet Aide in Italy Dies in Fall Off Cliff

Naples, Italy, Feb. 27 (AP).—The secretary of the Soviet Consulate here fell to his death today from a cliff on the outskirts of Naples.

Police said Dr. Nicolay Poleytchykov, 25, stepped too near the edge of the cliff while being photographed by another consulate secretary. The authorities reported there was no suspicion of foul play or suicide.

Israel and Lebanon Expected To Begin Conferring Tuesday

Tel Aviv, Israel, Feb. 27 (AP).—An Israel Foreign Office spokesman said today armistice talks between Israel and Lebanon probably will start Tuesday. He said the negotiations would be held at Ras en Nakura, a frontier station on the Haifa-Beirut road.

"No great difficulties are expected now, although the length of the forthcoming conference is unpredictable," he said.

A member of the staff of U. N. Mediator Dr. Ralph J. Bunche is expected to be present, while Bunche participates in the Israeli-Transjordan talks at Rhodes.

Israel already has signed an armistice with Egypt. The negotiations with Transjordan are scheduled to start Monday but probably will be delayed. The Transjordan delegation could not leave Amman because of bad weather today.

Israel to Be Friendly To U. S. and Russia Both

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 27 (U.P.).—Eliahu Elath, Israeli Ambassador-designate to the United States, said today the new Jewish state intends to "preserve and strengthen" its relations with both the United States and Russia.

He told the convention of the Jewish Labor Committee that final analysis has shown it was better for Israel "that we have to defend our state alone, rather than have it defended by American or Russian soldiers."

Truman's Program Faces GOP Blast

By The Associated Press

Republicans will blast President Truman's stabilization program as "planned economy" in a minority report from the Senate-House Economic Committee this week.

The Democratic majority of the committee, headed by Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, is expected to give full-fledged indorsement to Mr. Truman's proposal for a four billion dollar tax increase and for standby economic controls.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) told a reporter that Republicans won't pass up the opportunity to pin point their opposition to the President's program.

Taft wouldn't elaborate, but elsewhere it was learned that the Republicans plan to charge the President's program is aimed toward Government domination of business, particularly through Mr. Truman's proposal for Federal authority to build industrial plants.

O'Mahoney asked the Senate-House Economic Committee to meet today to go over the majority draft of its report.

Taft, as spokesman for the Republicans, has said he opposes higher taxes because they "take from the people the right to spend the money they have earned and spend it for something which the Government thinks is good for them."

Filibuster Opens Today

position to negotiate new or extended agreements with 36 nations at meetings scheduled to start April 11 at Annecy, France.

Bills on Must List

President Truman has asked for a three-year extension of the act, dating from last June 12, with elimination of restrictive provisions written into the law by the last Congress.

Added to measures facing deadlines of one type or another is the Administration's list of "must" legislation, such as repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law and enactment of a public housing bill.

Labor, already expressing concern over determined efforts to salvage many of the controversial law's provisions, is pressing for the Taft-Hartley repeal before its major unions begin negotiating new contracts this spring and summer.

Besides the ECA bill, some State Department officials expressed concern yesterday that an unchecked filibuster at this time may result in such a log jam of important legislation that there might be a dangerous delay in Senate ratification of the proposed North Atlantic security pact.

Senate Democratic leaders privately are saying that their one hope of successfully paving the way for passage of the civil rights program without a filibuster lies with Vice President Barkley.

It will fall to Barkley to make a technical ruling on whether a petition for cloture—shutting off debate—can be applied to a motion to bring up the antifilibuster resolution. Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader, is expected to support such a petition the latter part of next week.

Meanwhile yesterday, two liberal Republican Senators, Irving M. Ives of New York, and William F. Knowland of California, called for an all-out fight to break the threat of future filibusters by passing the Senate resolution. The measure would permit cutting off of filibusters by a two-thirds vote of Senators present.

Dewey Appeals to Taxpayers in GOP Revolt on Record N. Y. State Budget

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27 (U.P.)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey appealed to New York taxpayers tonight to support his record-breaking 936-million-dollar State budget program against a Republican revolt in the Legislature.

In a State-wide radio broadcast, Dewey called on the people to tell the rebellious Legislature they are ready to pay for the services they get. He said his recommendations for expenditures and a tax increase of $168,200,000 cover only essential needs of the people.

"The short of all this is, you can't get something for nothing," he added. "You can't, that is unless you're willing to postpone the cost, sell bonds and saddle your debts upon your children. In good conscience, I cannot recommend that."

Dewey told the men and women who pay the bill that the budget has already been cut until "it hurts." He said many needed functions were postponed because the State cannot afford them

The Governor said his 1949-50 budget could not be compared with the "vast increases" suggested in Federal spending.

"A lot of my good friends and supporters are appalled by the proposed Federal budget and want our State to set an example by cutting down," he said.

"But we are not proposing increases for new kinds of spending or any new experiments with new and novel tax burdens. On the contrary, in this State budget the tax rates proposed are lower, on the average, than the tax rates of the last prewar year, 1941."

Taft Would Delay Voting in Strikes

By the United Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday he is willing to change the Taft-Hartley law to ban employe elections during strikes.

The coauthor of the law made the statement in a radio debate on the University of Chicago Round Table of the Air program with Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) Both are members of the Senate Labor Committee.

Douglas said the law permits employers to smash unions by calling for elections during strikes "when the union men have been replaced by nonstrikers." Under the Act the union strikers would not be permitted to vote in the choice of a bargaining agent.

Plans Amendment

"I'd just as soon leave that out," Taft replied. "In fact, I'm going to put it in an amendment."

He referred to the fact that he and other Republican members of the Labor Committee are preparing amendments to the Administration's new labor bill, which would take the Taft-Hartley law off the books and substitute a modified form of the former Wagner Labor Relations Act.

The Republicans will get together on Wednesday to try to agree on their proposals, and the full committee is slated to meet Friday to start hewing out the new labor bill.

Taft also said he is willing to consider a provision to consider a provision to make certain that peaceful picketing is not forbidden. Douglas told him certain parts of the Taft-Hartley law forbidding union "coercion" might be taken to bar peaceful picketing.

For his part, Douglas said he did not oppose "the principles" of a non-Communist oath for union officials if employers must also swear that they are neither Communists nor Fascists. The Taft-Hartley law requires non-Communist affidavits from union officials wishing to use the services of the National Labor Relations Board. The administration bill has no such provision.

Both men poked fun at each other for being willing to accept modifications in measures supported by their respective political parties.

FEPC Urged By Tobin in Annual Report

By the United Press

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin urged Congress yesterday to establish a fair employment practices commission and put all Government labor functions in his department.

The requests were made in his annual report to Congress for the fiscal year ended last June 30, but bore on issues pending before Congress.

The summary appeared as reports circulated that the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization may recommend consolidation of all labor agencies under Tobin.

Tobin urged Congress "to enact legislation which would make it an unlawful practice for employers to discriminate in employment because of race, creed, color and national origin or ancestry and an unlawful practice for labor unions to discriminate, limit, segreate or classify their membership so as to have an adverse effect upon the opportunities for employment of persons working or seeking work."

Tobin again urged enactment of standby inflation controls, an increase in the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour, repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, equal pay for women, broader social security and other laws proposed by the President.

He said that during the last fiscal year more workers were fully employed than in the previous year and substantial numbers received larger incomes than at any previous time in their lives.

He said that average weekly earnings for the factory workers rose 7.8 per cent during the year but the cost of living went up 8.4 per cent. He said that because of the price increase, even though weekly earnings had gone up $4.50, the "worker was only about 50 cents ahead."

Pact Averts Power Strike

New York, Feb. 27 (U.P.)—An agreement was announced tonight between the Consolidated Edison Co. and the Utility Workers Union (CIO) ending the threat of a strike Wednesday which would seriously curtail electric and gas service in the metropolitan area.

Acting Mayor Vincent Impellitteri said the agreement is subject to ratification by the union's claimed 28,000-man membership and the company board of trustees. The agreement was announced both by Impellitteri and A. Augustus Low, Consolidated Edison vice president.

The accord provides for a general wage increase of 7 cents an hour, 12-cent increase for 17,000 workers in special categories, and other benefits, including a union shop.

The strike, which had been set for 12:01 a. m. Wednesday, would have paralyzed the company which supplies gas and electricity to eight million persons.

Medical Societies Face Trust Suits

By the United Press

The Government plans to crack down on alleged antitrust practices of "several" State medical associations, it was revealed today.

The action may come soon after President Truman sends his compulsory health insurance program to Congress.

A high Government official said the Federal Bureau of Investigation is "looking into" organized doctors in several States to see if their fight against prepaid medical plans violate the antitrust laws.

Visited by F B I

He wouldn't name the associations, nor would Justice Department attorneys, who handle antitrust cases, comment.

But doctors and medical associations in Seattle, Chicago, New York City and some California areas have reported "visits" from the FBI in recent weeks.

The United Press informant said Mr. Truman's health bill will be submitted to Congress soon and that the antitrust actions will follow promptly.

The President's bill, no matter what it calls for, will be one of the most hotly disputed issues before Congress.

Oregon Society Sued

The American Medical Association, parent of the State medical associations and arch foe of any Government prepaid medical plans, has charged the Administration is out to "socialize" medicine. The association is fighting the President's plan in advance with a three million dollar fund raised by assessments on members.

The Government already has filed an antitrust suit against the Oregon State Medical Society. The Justice Department charged the society with conspiracy to kill or stifle nonsociety medical plans.

Truman Shakeup Reported Studied

transferred to the Treasury Department. It believes, apparently, that the budget should remain under the President.

Also pointedly overlooked was a recommendation that Treasury's Secret Service be switched to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. A "task force" proposed that only those Secret Service functions relating to counterfeiting and forging of Government valuables be kept in Treasury.

In a previous report, the commision revealed that it had recommended the creation of an accountant general in Treasury to fix accounting standards for all agencies to follow.

SENATE: The Senate Expenditures Committee today may give its approval to the House-approved bill to give the President authority to reorganize Federal agencies. It's split over a proposal that the Army Engineers and several other "pet" agencies be exempted from reorganization.

STORY: A member of Congress was reading the Administration bill to extend Social Security to various classes of citizens. He gently nodded his head in aproval until he read the first few lines on Page 48. His eyes nearly popped as he read a provision which said the bill would cover people in Government activities not paid from funds apropriated by Congress in—

"Activities conducted by an instrumentality of the United States, subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense, at installations of the National Military Establishment for the comfort, pleasure, contentment, and mental and physical improvement of personnel of such establishment."

The congressman gulped; took on a quizzical look, and asked: "Isn't that going just a bit too far?"

P. S.: The provision is intended to cover employes of post exchanges, the Army Motion Picture Service, etc.

SOCIAL SECURITY: On that subject, the rival unions of postoffice clerks want no part of social security in any form for Federal workers. As revealed here Friday, upward of 400,000 temporary employes would be put under Social Security in the Doughton bill on public hearings starting today.

William C. Armbrust, president, United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, and Leo George, president of AFL's National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, revealed in statements that they will put up a slam-bang fight to keep Federal workers out of any and all provisions of the Social Security system. They both believe it's an opening wedge of Social Security to take over the Civil Service retirement system.

REVENUE: D. Spencer Bliss retires today as deputy commissioner in charge of Internal Revenue's miscellaneous tax unit. He's the oldest employe in point of service in Revenue, and perhaps in all Treasury. He started to work for Revenue on January 13, 1899. Charles J. Valaer will move up to acting deputy.

RATINGS: Although no formal vote was taken, the Civil Service commissioners are reported to be agreed that no substantial change can be made anytime soon in the efficiency rating system. In other words, Commissioner Frances Perkins has lost her fight to get her rating system adopted and placed into effect by March 31. Many agencies give annual ratings to their employes on that day; others rate on employe anniversaries.

However, the battle for simplification of the rating system has been won. All three commission members agree that the system must be made less complex. They haven't been able to agree on the method to be used.

ORDER: In the next day or so the Civil Service Commission will issue a new order to Federal agencies which is intended to find jobs for the 4500 Displaced Career Employes.

Ransom Client Tells Threats

band since he telephoned her Thursday from Judiciary sq. She said he told her then he was coming home. He did not arrive.

Ransom is chairman of the Committee for Racial Democracy in the Nation's Capital and former acting head of the Howard University Law School.

Parker said yesterday he had heard one union man say to Ransom, "We'll take care of you," as the missing lawyer left the meeting room in which he had appeared on Parker's behalf.

The second man, Parker said, told Ransom "I guess we'll have to get a strong-arm squad to take care of you."

The third threat was made by a rank and file union member according to Parker. He quoted the man as saying to Ransom: "We're going to take care of you."

In adidtion to Parker, Ransom is representing Harry S. Brown, jr., a former secretary-treasurer of the union. Brown has appealed his firing by the local membership to the international union. Brown appointed Parker as janitor, according to Thomas.

Saturday morning an unidentified man attempted to cash a check signed "Leon Ransom," at the Hollywood Credit Clothing Co., 703 7th st. nw. Police have been unable to locate the "James Smith" to whom the check was made out, or the man who attempted to cash it.

Mrs. Ransom said the Ransom signature was a forgery, but while the clothing shop attempted to verify the check, the man who presented it vanished.

Account of Meeting

Parker gave the following account of the union meeting: the meeting started late, at about 8:30 p. m. Ransom asked a union member when the meeting would start. The member said he didn't know whether there would be a meeting. Ransom said that he ought to know. Then the member said, "I guess I better get some strong-arm men to take care of you."

Then another member appeared, told Parker he had no business suing the local for back pay, and asked Ransom for his brief case. Ransom, told him that he had no right to examine it. Then the union man said "We're going to take care of you."

A telephone call for Ransome—from Brown—was answered in the union meeting room. Ransom told Brown to come to local headquarters immediately. In the meeting room Ransom brought up the threats. The threats were denied and an argument ensued.

When Ransom and Parker left the meeting room, another member said to Ransom "We'll take care of you."

Thomas said the argument in the meeting room concerned whether Parker had a right to sue for wages allegedly owed for work performed three years ago.

Sweden Seen Joining Pact

alliance still is open, but that it could not succeed unless Norway joined. He said he felt it best for Sweden to adopt a "wait and see" policy in international affairs for the next five or six months.

Finland, saddled with a mutual defense treaty with the Soviet Union after three wars with the Russians, may be an important figure in the Scandinavian picture. She is bound by the treaty to help Russia in any war, although her people generally have little love for their nextdoor neighbors.

Russia already has a Finnish military base at Porkkala, from which Red army troops could reach the capital in a matter of minutes, if the Soviets wanted to get tough.

Finns Fear More Pressure

The Finns, seeking to fend off expected Russian demands for more bases, fear the heat will become intense after Norway has made her tie to the Western powers official.

Denmark fears her geographical location makes her a tempting plum to Russian eyes. Danish bases would be important in control of the sea gateway from Leningrad to the Atlantic.

Pact Sponsors Are Confident

drag through preceding weeks—have indicated rapid progress.

Moreover, the Norweigian government, despite severe pressure from the Communist giant just across its border, has moved toward formal action to throw in its lot with the Western powers by joining in the pact.

Overwhelming bipartisan support for the treaty has been indicated in the Senate if the terms adhere to the pattern established in the Rio de Janeiro Western Hemisphere Defense Alliance within the framework of the United Nations.

A more difficult congressional course, however, has been forecast for legislation to implement the North Atlantic treaty, once it has been ratified, by providing American military supplies to strengthen the armed forces of the western European allies.

Still in Drafting Stage

This legislation is still in the drafting stage, with high-ranking experts in military, economic and related fields striving to work out a balance between what the allies will need and what the United States can send them without endangering both European and domestic civilian recovery.

An Administration proposal to authorize about one billion dollars to finance the first year of this Nation's participation in the North Atlantic pact plus the transfer of two billion dollars to three billion dollars worth of surplus military equipment to the European participants has been informally predicted.

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, while inclined to support a North Atlantic pact along the lines of the Rio pact, has expressed doubt as to the wisdom of sending military supplies to Europe.

His view is that, while the Russians could regard the signing of the treaty merely as a defensive measure, they might look upon the sending of arms to Europe as an offensive action and use it as as excuse for warlike moves.

Navy Tests Atom Defenses

dropped "window" aluminum foil to jam radar of the carriers and protecting destroyers.

Vice Admiral D. B. Duncan, commander of the carrier task force, in a dispatch to Blandy blamed the failure to intercept the A-bomb attack on a "combination of indifferent radar performance in not detecting group at greater range and insufficient number of fighters assigned to combat air patrol because of other heavy commitments for air support."

The Bat-carrying planes were presumed to have been shot down.

Blandy said the purpose of the A-bomb attack was to "develop defense by ships against atomic bomb attacks." He emphasized that it was not to show that Navy planes could deliver an A-bomb successfully.

Carriers Spaced on Circle

For defense against attack, the carriers were evenly spaced around the circumference of a circle with a radius of 2500 yards. The escorting destroyers were evenly spaced on an outer circle with a radius of 4000 yards.

Blandy said he considered failure of the mock A-bomb to inflict any greater damage than it theoretically did shows that the fleet has a "reasonably fair degree of defense at the present time against atomic bomb attack."

But, he added, "we have farther to go to develop it."

The maneuvers are taking place on Vieques island, southeast of Puerto Rico.

A Navy spokesman said the Air Force was invited to participate but declined.

(An Air Force spokesman in Washington declined to comment on the report.)

In the Bikini tests an air explosion sank five ships. But the vessels in today's test were widely spaced in an attempt to prove the contention of top naval experts that an extended cruising formation would hold losses to a maximum of one ship.

In all, 35,000 men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and a Canadian cadre are engaged in the maneuvers which reach their cilmax Tuesday and Wednesday with the "invasion" of Vieques.

"Mighty Mo" Taking Part

The attacking force consists of more than 100 warships, including the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt and the battleship Missouri.

Members of the Senate and House Armed Services Committee were flown here to get a first-hand look at the peacetime services in action.

Original plans had called for only one photographer, representing a picture magazine, to view the simulated A-bomb drop. But a number of reporters were taken along in an escorting observation plane at the last moment.

One on the Aisle—

The Newlyweds Took Her Kids

By Richard L. Coe

"FAMILY HONEYMOON," at the Palace, is the sort of picture most people will like. It's got a lot of laughs and two popular stars, Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray.

The gags and situations are tumbled together in a script that doesn't stand too close scrutiny. I have an idea its authors thought this might be another "Sitting Pretty." It isn't, but that won't keep flocks of folks from enjoying themselves.

The title about sums up the plot. Miss Colbert plays a widow with three children about to marry a bachelor professor. When her sister breaks her leg at their wedding, the best answer to the sitter problem seems to be to take the kids along on the honeymoon. Off they trek to the Grand Canyon amid the discomforts of travel and there they barge into a jealous female who'd unsuccessfully tried to nab MacMurray for herself.

Now, granted you will enjoy the gags and situations for what they're worth, the fact remains Dane Lussier's screen play from Homer Croy's novel should have been better than it is. Just what Croy asked you to believe on paper, I don't know, though I'm sure his facile style didn't give you time to see the holes and incredulities in the plot.

The role of the other woman—Rita Johnson—trying to latch on to Fred is a lazy Hollywood cliche. The details of honeymooning with three obstreperous kids could far better have been elaborated on without throwing the familiar triangle at an audience. There is something definitely unreal about Fred knowing so little of the children, which is fine for the sake of individual gags, but foolish when you think of how much more could have been made of a stepfather's problems.

It is this insistence on hewing to the tried formula that keeps "Family Honeymoon" from being any more than a patchwork of running gags. Don't get me wrong, I enjoyed the laughs, but I couldn't help, during the arid spots, thinking how much more amusing the total might have been had the accent been on character and not on a situation story.

It's always a pleasure, to be sure, to watch the Colbert-MacMurray costarring team. They're likable as ever. The children are in the happy hands of Gigi Perreau, Jimmy Hunt and Peter Miles.

Gigi is just as charming as she is in "Enchantment," a refreshing child. Peter Miles, her real-life brother through whose screen test Gigi came to the attention of Samuel Goldwyn, is her brother Abner in this one and Jimmy Hunt is the wayward Charlie.

Yes, most people will get a lot of chuckles out of "Family Honeymoon," but that will be because of the un-Hollywood accent on the trifles, not the Hollywoodian concept of a professor's romance. People, thank gosh, aren't like that, not even professors and well-to-do widows.

At the Hippodrome

THE HIPPODROME also broke out with a new bill Saturday, a double-header.

Top spot goes to the final third of Marcel Pagnol's trilogy about the seaport people of Marseille. This is "Gesar," an eminently satisfactory windup to the stories of "Fanny" and "Marius."

With Raimu, Orane Demazis and Pierre Fresnay in the roles they've played in the earlier adventures, "Cesar" is delightful, rich, earthy and soundly based on character. You'll find that Fanny and Marius are reunited after 20 years and you'll marvel that this series, begun 15 years ago and completed at least a decade, has a freshness that belies its years.

Sacha Guitry's tribute to his father, Lucien, is the other feature, "The Private Life of an Actor." There is too much Sacha here and it's not the Sacha who made "The Story of a Cheat" so amusing. There are flashes of his ironic wit, but too few. The treatment is episodic and with the actor playing both himself and his father one is often at a loss to tell the two apart.

The present Mme. Sacha Guitry, Lani Marconi, is the leading lady and one can only lament the fading of Guitry's taste in actress-wives. He once was married to Yvonne Printemps. His youthful taste was above reproach.

"FAMILY HONEYMOON." Universal-International release. Screen play by Dane Lussier from a novel by Homer Croy. Photographed by William Daniels. Grand Canyon settings pictured through arrangement with the National Capital Parks. Directed by Claude Binyon. At the Palace.

heckler shouted. "Down with war," said another.

Churchill, undaunted, continued speaking, alternating in English and faltering French. Most of the crowd cheered when he apologized for his French.

"If we take all the necessary precautionary measures," he said, "there is no reason why Europe should not become once again a great asylum for freedom-loving people."

In case of an attack, he said, "the great republic of the United States sends you the necessary guarantee of its assistance."

Spaak also was jeered and booed when he said "Communists represent war. We represent peace."

The Belgian Premier, angered by the hecklers, shouted:

"In 1940 you Communists advocated neutrality because the war we were waging against Hitler was allegedly a capitalistic war. Your friends stabbed Poland in the back. They signed a nonaggression pact with Germany. The only war we have fought is one which was imposed upon us—and we won that one."

Men Who Get Up Nights often Lose Their Pep

Red Cross Drive Opened by Barkley

In impressive, enthusiastic ceremonies, keynoted by Vice President Alben W. Barkley, the American Red Cross last night set out to collect 60 million dollars to finance its manifold activities during the coming year.

Warmed by the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" which wafted through crowded Constitution Hall just before his talk, the Vice President saw in the Red Cross a powerful agency for the spread of world-wide neighborliness.

The Red Cross operations which send specialists, ambulances and hospital supplies overseas and invite foreign Red Cross workers over here, Barkley called the "kind of international neighborliness which can help pave the way for peace on the solid basis of mutual interests and mutual welfare."

Global Good Neighbor

The United States, whether it wants it or not, said Barkley, has been thrust into the role of "good neighbor on a global scale. The nation looks forward to the Red Cross to take a share in this responsibility."

The crowd of almost 4000 also heard a vigorous endorsement of the Red Cross from Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, who said he learned all about the Red Cross as a "wartime Red Cross Widower."

Because the Red Cross maintains no distinction in race, creed, or color, our debt to it goes beyond the tangible, Hoffman said. It fosters a "feeling of togetherness" which serves not only humanity but also democracy, he said.

Faces Increased Calls

H. Randolph Maddox, chairman of the 1949 fund drive, pointed out that the Red Cross faces increased calls on its resources in 1949 and warned against overconfidence during the drive, which he said, leads to complacency.

He praised the District for its contributions which during the past six years have kept its record at or near the top among those of the great cities of the Nation.

For the third straight year, the program included a broadcast of United States Steel Corporation's Theatre Guild on the Air. The production chosen for the occasion was "Payment Deferred," the Jeffrey Dell thriller based on the novel by C. S. Forester.

Laughton In Chief Role

Charles Laughton, appearing in the role in which he made his American stage debut, was his enervated, thwarted theatrical self as the debt-ridden bank clerk turned killer who was finally ensnared by poetic justice.

His valiant, persevering wife was played by Jessica Tandy, the Old Vic graduate famous for her current Broadway portrayal of the decaying Southern belle in the Pulitzer prize-winning "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Speaking later on behalf of the Red Cross drive, Laughton said, "If you'll think twice about what the Red Cross does, you'll give twice as much."

Tonight, President Truman will go on the air to speak for the Red Cross. He will be joined over the ABC network on a program beginning at 9:30 p. m. by Basil O'Connor, president of the Red Cross, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, James Stewart and Helen Hayes.

Fingers Only
Bedridden Youth Cures Sick Motors

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
DICK SPERE
. . . Hotrod shop in bedroom

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Bedridden young Dick Spere runs a "hotrod" garage in his bedroom.

Dick, who is 16, piloted his own "fast iron," as the stripped-down, souped-up speedy roadsters are called, until he was grounded about a year ago.

A lung ailment has kept him down since then. His doctor forbids Dick to use his hands. Only his fingers may be brought into play. But for Dick that's enough—he can manipulate a wrench and a screw driver.

He got started when: "One of the guys brought in the ignition system on his car and asked if I could fix it. From that time on I've been running what amounts to a speed shop."

The place looks more like a garage than a sick room. Parts of a carburetor, bolts and cotter pins littered his blanket. A partly assembled auto clutch peeped from under the bed. A motor scooter was in the corner, its dismounted engine on a stand by the boy's elbow.

"A lot of the stuff is my own," he says. "I fix it up and either trade it for better stuff or sell it. I'm putting some finishing touches on my car, too. I want to sell it and use the money to buy a television set and maybe some technical books on auto engineering."

fend will commend itself to the favor of responsible citizens in a free country. Similarly, advocates of change, unless they intend violent revolution and the forcible overthrow of majority government, should understand that their proposals, to be adopted, must have merits sufficiently demonstrable to attract support."

Although no names were mentioned in the resolution on scientic theories, the pronouncement was generally regarded as a reference to a recent dismissal of an Oregon State University chemistry professor for supporting the Russian Communist Lysenko's theory of genetics.

Lysenko claims environment, not heredity, is the prime factor in determining individual characteristics. His theory conflicts with the generally accepted Mendelian Law.

In their resolution the educators warned that no scientific theory should be elevated to the status of a dogma or counter-dogma which a teacher must support or reject on pain of dismissal.

Scientific thought admits no absolute unrevisable truths, the resolution said. A serious threat to freedom of thought and expression would result if professors were forced to adhere to scientific theories indorsed by governments, it was stated.

Another resolution passed at the meeting reaffirmed a previous statement of the AAUP opposing political pressure and interference in matters of appointments, promotions and dismissals of professors at private or public institutions.

The professors called for Social Security coverage of employes of educational and other institutions not now covered in the act, and Federal grants in aid to graduate and undergraduate students on the basis of need and ability.

The committee dealt with 86 cases of academic freedom and tenure during 1948, and 30 of the controversies were withdrawn or closed after investigation.

Officers of the AAUP are Ralph H. Lutz, Stanford University professor of history, president; John A. Kinneman, professor of sociology at Illinois State Normal University, first vice president; Marie J. Weiss, professor of mathematics, Tulane University, second vice president; Ralph E. Himstead, general secretary; George Pope Shannon, associate secretary, and Florence P. Lewis, professor of mathematics at Goucher College, treasurer.

The AAUP has offices at 1101 Connecticut ave. nw.

Berlin Airlift Drops Under 7000-Ton Mark

Berlin, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Allied airlift to Berlin dropped below the 7000-ton mark today for the first time in six days.

In 744 flights, British and American planes hauled 6746 tons to the Soviet-blockaded western sectors.

This was 1279 tons below yesterday's record performance, but still more than 2000 tons above the minimum daily food and fuel requirements.

As Red Cross Fund Drive Starts

GALA AFFAIR—The American Red Cross last night kicked off its 1949 fund drive with ceremonies and a network broadcast at Constitution Hall here. Vice President Alben W. The dramatic presentation was a part of last night's program

Postlude

Lipkin Shows Maturity And Insight

By Richard Keith

Seymour Lipkin, 21-year-old winner of last year's Rachmaninoff Award, appeared as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall. It was an all-Tchaikowsky concert with Dr. Hans Kindler conducting.

Mr. Lipkin played the first Tchaikowsky Concerto, a piece which, although played to death, is a good vehicle for showing off a pianist's gifts. In spite of his slight build, he can make the piano thunder with the best of them. At no time was he embarrassed by being covered up.

In addition, his playing shows a maturity and penetrating insight seldom found in anyone so youthful. His interpretation of the lyrical second movement was especially sensitive. He certainly seems to possess the necessary abilities for becoming one of our leading artists.

Dr. Kindler led the orchestra in the Introduction and Waltz from Eugene Onegin and the Fifth Symphony. They bounced through the Waltz in high spirits and in a perfect tempo.

The 5th Symphony is a gigantic emotional jag; yesterday, Dr. Kindler and the orchestra squeezed every sigh and tear out of it. It was a very effective, if somewhat, exhausting, performance. The resonant string section, kept to a high level of intensity throughout, was almost overpowering at many points. The solo clarinetist stole the show in the second movement with his velvet tone and splendid sense of phrasing. The brasses, of course, had the last movement mostly to themselves, and they rose to the occasion.

The audience responded with almost an ovation.

The after-effects of an all-Tchaikowsky program are usually fairly distressing. One feels a violent urge for an antidotal dose of Haydn or Mozart. Nevertheless, for those who like an emotional roller coaster ride, yesterday's concert could scarcely be topped.

Retirement Today to End 51-Yr. 'Chore'

Back in 1898, young Estelle Harrison, finding that keeping house for her four brothers left her with some time on her hands, decided to take on another chore.

So the 14-year-old orphan, "like a big girl," called at the old State, War and Navy Building and signed on as a messenger at a little less than $5 a week.

Today Miss Harrison retires from that extra chore, after 51 years of it. And during the half-century in which she rose from messenger to forewoman of cleaners, and became the oldest Federal Works Agency employe in point of service, she found time to raise her orphaned niece, now Mrs. Mary Black, who lives with her at 2415 20th st. nw.

Pleas Ready For Negroes In Death Case

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27 (U.P.)—O. John Rogge, former assistant United States attorney general, said tonight he would file briefs with the New Jersey Supreme Court Monday appealing the death sentence of three Negroes convicted in what he called a "Northern Scottsboro case."

Six Negroes were convicted and sentenced to death in the case, which involved the murder of William Horner, 73-year-old Trenton furniture dealer bludgeoned to death January 27, 1948. Sentences of the other three also have been appealed.

Says Court Didn't Act

Rogge complained the Supreme Court had failed to act promptly on a motion filed last week asking for more time in which to file briefs. He said the court had advised him it would rule on his motion Monday, deadline for filing the briefs, and therefore he had no alternative but to file them.

Meanwhile, Mercer County Prosecutor Mario H. Volpe denied that five of the Negroes were given doped cigarettes and doped water before they confessed the fatal beating of Horner.

Charges By Pearson

The charges were made tonight by Drew Pearson, radio commentator In His Weekly Boadcast (ABC). Pearson said the only man who did not confess, Horace Wilson, turned down all cigarettes and refused all water except from the prison spigot.

Volpe admitted testimony showed three of the defendants claimed they "blacked out" after being given cigarettes by police.

ment for cuts and bruises. Two of those hospitalized were reported in critical condition.

Edwin Collins, Grosse Pointe, Mich., accomplished an almost unbelievable feat of physical strength in saving the lives of two fellow students.

Collins, a college weight lifter, jumped from the window of his second-floor room to a fire escape, where he swung by one arm.

In the other arm, he first caught a student who jumped from the third floor. He transferred that student to the fire escape with the free arm.

Still he hung there. The hot metal of the escape ate into the palm of his hand, but he clung grimly. Flames licked at his face.

Another student jumped from an adjoining second-story window. Collins caught him and transfered him to safety on the escape.

Finally, he could stand no more and dropped to the ground.

Collins is hospitalized with facial burns and badly burned hands.

Acid Test

At noon today Majority Leader Lucas will move to take up in the Senate the proposed change in the rules making it possible to cut off a filibuster at any time by a two-thirds vote. The motion is certain to encounter a filibuster. Southern Senators rightly look upon this effort to facilitate the limitation of debate as the first step toward enactment of the President's civil rights program. Indications are that they will resist it with all the wind and laryngeal fortitude they can muster. The fight will thus doubtless become a severe test for the Truman Administration.

If the filibuster runs on week after week, the possibility of enacting Mr. Truman's Fair Deal into law will be seriously impaired. The Administration is said to fear, and not without good reason, that if the struggle becomes acrimonious it may lose many Southern votes for other parts of its program. Yet that is a chance it has to take. If the right of unlimited debate against taking up a bill is not curbed now, talk-fests will have to be faced later when the calendar will be crowded with important measures awaiting action. There seems to be no easy escape from the dilemma. Even if Vice President Barkley reverses Senator Vandenberg's ruling and holds that the present cloture rule can be applied to debate on motions to take up a bill, he may not be sustained by vote of the Senate. Senator Taft thinks the rule should be changed by amendment and not interpretation. If most of the Republicans agree and the Administration holds to its purpose, the filibuster can go on indefinitely.

It will be an acid test for the Democratic Party as well as the Administration. Presumably the voters returned that party to power because of disgust with the record of the Eightieth Congress. But if the performance of Congress is not improved, what will the voters say in 1950 and 1952? Democratic leaders in both the North and the South will have to find ways of working together or risk a critical loss of public confidence. The dissidents cannot be expected, of course, to swallow the President's program whole. But at some point there will have to be a meeting of minds if the country and the Democratic Party are to be saved from tragic failures. The impending fight over the elementary issue of majority control in the national legislature is certainly not an encouraging prospect.

Coming Clean

Some of our readers perhaps will recall a paid advertisement, signed by the Communist Party of Maryland and the Communist Party of Washington, D. C., that appeared a little more than two years ago in The Washington Post and some other newspapers hereabouts. At the time we felt it necessary to reply editorially to some of the statements contained in it. We should like to quote again from the advertisement in order to illustrate further a point we have often made about the intricacies of the Communist psychology.

> We American Communists have only one loyalty. It is to our country, the United States of America, and above all to the working class and people of America . . . We are pledged to support and defend the United States Constitution and its Bill of Rights against its reactionary enemies who would destroy popular liberties and the gains of labor.

The problem is to square that declaration with the statements made last week by M. Thorez, secretary general of the French Communist Party, and Signor Togliatti, leader of the Italian Communists. Each has said in so many words that if an army engaged in aggressive war against the Soviet Union should be pursued by Soviet forces over the boundaries of France or Italy it would become the duty of the French or Italian working classes to welcome the Soviet army and to give it every aid. Both leaders made it perfectly clear that any power or combination of powers which might become engaged in war with Russia would be considered ipso facto the aggressor.

The discrepancy between the statements of our local Communists and those of the Messrs. Thorez and Togliatti can, perhaps, be removed by observing that the passage quoted may be read one way by uninstructed readers and another way by the initiate. If, as the true Communists hold, the interests of Soviet Russia and the working classes are everywhere identical, then, of course, it would be the highest form of loyalty for a Communist to aid the invasion of his country by a Russian army. American Communists do not employ the usual formula about defending the Constitution against all enemies "domestic and foreign," but simply promise to defend it against "reactionary enemies." Reactionary, in the party lexicon, is the generic term for any persons or groups including Trotskyites and Social Fascists (Second International Socialists) who oppose whatever the Progressive forces (Communists and Fellow Travelers) are instructed by the current party line to favor. The meaning then seems to be that the Communists will support the existing form of government and the liberties guaranteed under it as long as it in the interest of their activities and propaganda to do so. We are grateful to the Messrs. Thorez and Togliatti for having thrown off the mask of patriotism and thus clarified the question.

Broken China

While the dust is settling in China, as Secretary Acheson puts it, let us reflect again on communism there. It has been our thesis hitherto that what is happening in that great country is another immense convulsion in the travail that China has been undergoing since the T'aip'ing Rebellion of 1850-1864. The travail developed out of the impact of Western ideas and institutions upon Traditional China. For a matter of 40 centuries prior to the T'aip'ing rising China had absorbed everything and everybody that came in contact with China. Its metabolism is a historical phenomenon. From the Nestorians and the Jews to the Great Khans and the eighteenth century Russians—intruders disappeared into the maw of China. The last spectacle of the sort was the swift and remorseless way that the Chinese softened the invading Japanese.

In this respect the Chinese are markedly different from the Russians, who under Peter the Great were particularly aggressive, and were in turn overthrown and run by the peripheral peoples they had conquered. For the Bolshevist revolution came from outside the true Russia, and Stalin himself, like Hitler in Germany, is a foreigner in the country he dominates.

The revolutionary force which is keeping China in a ferment requires a catalytic agent in the form of a leader. None since the T'aip'ing leader, Hung Hsui-ch'uan, has yet measured up to the titanic task, and even Hung was frustrated after 15 years of conflict by foreign intervention on the side of the decaying Manchu dynasty of China. Will Mao Tze-tung be the catalytic agent? The watching eyes of the world are waiting for an answer as they follow Mao's Communists in process of taking over this ancient subcontinent. Mao is a Marxist, having learned Marx in Chinese translation, and seems to be an authentic practitioner of the party line, as well as a devoted believer in the Lenin-Stalinist ideology. But if he turns out like Hung (a Christian whose Christianity must have appalled the missionary home in which he learned it) he will be a curious Communist, indeed.

However, the policy-maker is mainly interested at present in the question about his leadership—whether he can first win control and then keep it. One thing only is clear: all China takes a lot of conquering, especially in view of the many factions involved in the struggle, for they are by no means limited to Nationalist and Communist. Whether Mao is the man is by no means clear.

Reports are that in the areas Mao has absorbed there are signs of administrative talent in Mao's organization. This is what Hung lacked, and Mao, moreover, seems to have a Chinese gift for compromise, temporary or otherwise, as well as a modern genius for guerilla warfare. But conclusive evidence of the requisite statesmanship for unifying China is still absent.

Will Soviet Russia help Mao to complete his task or be asked for help? Either is doubtful. Soviet Russia got badly stung in the intervention of 1927, and, besides, the oldest state in the world is like the world's newest state of Israel in that it is in a fever of nationalism, and this does not comport with subservience. This nationalism is enhanced, moreover, by irredentism. Let us never forget that Nationalist and Communist in China are one in their anxiety to win back Manchuria, and there is only one "treaty of national betrayal" left for the liquidation that Mao calls for, to wit, the Sino-Soviet treaty of 1945. Thus it is not strange that the Kremlin has been rather quiet about Communist successes in China, and that it has ordered its embassy in Nanking to follow the rump of the Chiang regime to Canton, being the only embassy to shift. Moscow, too, wants to see the dust settle before involvement is risked. It is nonsense to say that Stalin has hitherto given Mao anything substantial in the way of assistance.

There is another factor to ponder, and that is that Chinese civilization is more alien to communism than is any other civilization. In this connection we cannot do better than cite the comment of Dr. Wellington Koo, China's Ambassador to Washington, to the Lytton Commission in 1931:

> More profound causes account for the Chinese aversion to communism. At first communism has a certain mystic halo around it. It is a belief, and for some of its followers a religion. But the Chinese brought up in the positivist and pragmatic philosophy of Confucius are not mystical at all. The human element always ultimately triumphs over the speculative element. Mysticism is an innate spiritual disposition. It cannot be created in a milieu which is unfavorable to it. Even when the Chinese is carried away by a fit of passion, his strong common sense comes back to him after a period of mental unequilibrium, and he again lives in his traditional concepts.

Have the Chinese changed very much since these wise words were written? Not very noticeably.

If all this adds up to a potential Tito situation, well, that is merely the addition of ineluctable present-day facts. Mao, to be sure, has denounced Tito, but pronunciamentos in China are stylized affairs, as when a Chinese government abolished illiteracy by pronunciamento. A paper blast against Tito is thus not particularly significant. It is like figuring out how far the tide is going to flow to figure out the future of China. But what may be hazarded in front of a dust that has a Gobi density is that we are not witnessing in China foreign tyranny that is being imposed upon the Chinese people, that the Western world is facing a phenomenon more Chinese than Russian, and that the convulsion cannot be understood outside the context of Chinese history. If Russia took over China, the action would fly in the face of 4000 years of history, and the sure end would be the absorption of Russia.

Britain And ERP

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings scheduled for today to review the tentative allocation of ERP funds to Great Britain are designed to clear up the confusion caused by the injudicious remarks of Britain's Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs. The American reaction to Mr. Mayhew's assertion that British recovery had been virtually completed and the country could now turn to new social and economic experiments demonstrates the need for a campaign of education to acquaint the public as well as some members of Congress with the relationship of cause and effect between the Marshall Plan and Britain's economic progress.

Britain has unquestionably made rapid strides toward recovery, having raised production to prewar levels. Even greater progress has been made in foreign trade, with British exports reaching record levels last month in both volume and value. This gratifying achievement was possible, however, only because the United States allotted Britain more than 1.2 billion dollars during the first year of the Marshall Plan to pay for imported foods and raw materials. Without this outside aid, the British would have been forced to subsist on inadequate rations while their industries would have gone backward instead of forward for lack of essential materials and equipment. In short, British recovery to date is largely a product of American aid.

As Sir Stafford Cripps points out in a formal statement designed to counteract the unfortunate effect of Mr. Mayhew's remarks, the continuance of American aid is essential if Great Britain is to achieve her primary objective—recovery on a scale that will make her independent of outside help. That goal cannot be reached, however, for some time to come. Sir Stafford says: "We shall still need next year food, goods and services from the Western Hemisphere, for which payment must be in dollars, to a value of more than one billion dollars in excess of the dollars we can hope with all our efforts and in most favorable conditions to earn." This sums up the position in terms that the American public should be able to understand and explains why ECA Administrator Hoffman considers the 940-million-dollar provisional allotment for Britain the "absolute minimum necessary to provide the required imports of Great Britain if the present recovery momentum is to be maintained not only in Britain but in all of Europe."

Significant Wage Cut

The cut in the wages of General Motors employes resulting from a drop in living costs since October 15 is only 2 cents an hour, and the workers can look forward to a more than offsetting 3-cent increase at the end of May under the "standard of living improvement" clause in UAW's contract with GM. The present reduction follows a 3-cent increase under the cost-of-living formula last September based on a preceding rise in living costs. So on net balance the workers have gained, not lost, by agreeing to quarterly adjustments of wages with reference to changes in living costs.

Nevertheless, the current reduction in wage rates is a significant development. Coupled as it is with declines in living costs, it will strengthen opposition to fourth-round wage increases during the next few months. Extensive wage increases would probably entail further rises in prices of industrial products, and might revive subsiding inflationary forces. Hence they constitute one of the greatest potential menaces to economic stability.

Another significant development associated with the cut in GM wages is the accompanying reduction in prices of GM's new models. To be sure, the price cuts are small both absolutely and by comparison with the rise in new model prices announced just a month ago. However, the company's action testifies to its willingness to share with consumers the benefits of wage reductions that lower production costs. In spite of the Ford and Chrysler decisions not to follow suit, GM's action should have a salutary effect on automobile pricing policies at a time when manufacturers are tempted to charge all the traffic will bear. The profits of major automobile companies are at high levels. In the long run, it will be to their advantage to share some of those profits with the buying public in the form of lower prices for their cars. By so doing they will not only be in a much better position to resist demands for further wage increases; they will also be better equipped to maintain sales at profitable levels when the present extraordinary buying demand has been satisfied, as it soon will be.

When Doctors Disagree

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Weasel Words

Allow me to express my feelings of indignation and also of humiliation that at this critical time, when Europe is looking to the United States for militant leadership, any member of Congress should indulge in equivocal and weasel words seeking to qualify the aid we must inevitably extend in the event of aggressive warfare by the Soviet Union.

This kind of talk is as futile as it is pusillanimous. It should be fairly clear by now that the Senate can always pledge by treaty that the country in certain circumstances would go to war, and that the Senate could likewise repudiate such commitments if it should sink that low.

It is clear also that Congress can get around the obstacle of the two-thirds rule in the Senate by a joint resolution. And, furthermore, the President by his comprehensive powers as Commander in Chief of the armed forces, as well as by his paramount obligations in the conduct of foreign relations, can always either recognize or even precipitate a state of war which Congress is constrained to acknowledge.

No legalistic reservations or phraseology can alter the menacing realities of the world situation. The United States is already committed by its declarations and acts, as well as by the threats to its own security, to a policy of active resistance to any warlike aggressions by the Soviet Union in Europe. We cannot afford to be vague and equivocal in word or act.

Ezra Pound's Prize

Dr. Koch and Mr. Lowry, in their letter of February 24, seem to be laboring under a misapprehension. They assume that it is possible to pick out one act or trait of a human being and use it as a label for his whole personality. This is a grave error. Each of us is a bundle of mixed qualities, good and evil; and there is some good, and may even be genius, in the most hardened criminal.

Very likely Pound is a traitor. In the present state of human society, it is no doubt necessary that those who commit overt acts against their group should be punished. But to refuse a deserved prize to Pound's poetry, on the ground that Pound has been accused of treason, is too much like the Nazi banning of Mendelssohn's music because Mendelssohn was a Jew. It assumes that human beings are all of a piece, that the human race can be divided into sheep and goats—the sheep, of course, being those who agree with us; the goats, those who don't. That is the road to tyranny.

Atom Bomb Defense

The press tells us the Navy is assembling 120 ships, hundreds of planes and 35,000 men in the Caribbean to test our ability to repel an "enemy" naval striking force seeking to make an amphibious landing on an island off Puerto Rico. The "enemy" is to be aided in the attack by a single dummy A-bomb.

Just what potential enemy has a "naval striking force" is not indicated. Surely not the Russians. And it is not explained just why, if they had an extra A-bomb, they should waste it on our fleet, when they might use it in an underwater burst, to drench New York with radioactivity, or to knock the heart out of Detroit or Chicago, after it had been smuggled in.

Isn't it time that we grew a little realistic and began to plan defense against the weapons and tactics most likely to be used against us, if war comes again? Smuggled bombs and bombs planted off our coastlines by submarines unquestionably are our greatest danger, and those most difficult to defend against.

Segregated Blood

As one who donated blood to the Red Cross blood banks several times during the late war, I read with considerable disgust the February 23 account of the rejection of non-segregated blood (offered by the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington) by the District Red Cross. Such an attitude by representatives of this generally worthy organization made a mockery of Brotherhood Week and gives another black eye to the Nation's Capital as far as world opinion is concerned.

The stated reason for the rejection was that acceptance would interfere with free choice by both patients and doctors. In view of the findings of science that human blood is not distinguishable as to race or religion, we must be a people of irrational nincompoops to maintain such fantastic fears as are implied here. Transit Radios

The new pest that the Capital Transit Co. is imposing upon the paying public without its consent should be abolished. The music is not soft and soothing as had been promised; it is loud and raucous and most annoying. Those of us who want to read, simply cannot concentrate. A few of the drivers have hinted to various passengers that they do not like the music. If I were the driver of a bus and had to listen to that drivel all day long, I would soon land in St. Elizabeths, and undoubtedly some of the drivers will.

Armed Forces College

If all aspirants to a commission in the armed forces were enrolled in one armed forces college, thereby having common interests in academics and in sports, then we would have begun to solve the problem of unification.

I liken such a college to any university in the country. All freshmen in the school take virtually the same courses, are treated in the same manner, and have a common loyalty to the same college. After either their freshman or sophomore years, they then specialize in the field which holds their interest. However, they all have that common feeling of affection for their "alma mater."

Why shouldn't an armed forces college be operated in much the same manner? After two years of common studies and common participation in sports and the like, they could then specialize in land, sea or air warfare. Upon graduation each would be commissioned an officer in the armed forces with a primary duty in the arm in which specialized.

Irregular Air Carriers

Regarding the February 23 advertisement by the Scheduled Airlines of the United States, may I be permitted to answer their questions and charges?

Immediately following World War II, DC-3s and DC-4s became available from war surplus, and the returning war veteran pilots and other Air Force personnel began purchasing these planes and began non-scheduled air transportation business with the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board. They perform the necessary maintenance and overhaul which they are required to comply with; and maintain substantially the same safety regulations as are imposed upon the scheduled carriers.

Through the initiative of these irregular carriers, the potentialities of coach air passage service has been highly developed. Due to such competition, the public in turn is receiving a great many benefits. The big scheduled airlines have substantially reduced their rates, including the "family plan" rates offered as a result of our competition.

The scheduled airlines, finding that this new business developed by the irregular carriers has become profitable and substantial, are now trying desperately to exclude the irregular carriers. However, the Department of Justice has gone on record at the recent CAB hearings in favor of the non-scheduled operators. They believe that the declared policy of Congress, favoring the fundamental principles of free enterprise, should be upheld. The highly burdensome restrictions to be set up by the CAB are one of the many methods being used to wipe out free competition for the benefit of large corporations.

Associated Airlines Agency, Inc., represents a number of irregular air carriers which are duly registered with the Civil Aeronautics Board and is certified for safety by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. All pilots and co-pilots hold the highest possible transport airline ratings. They all have perfect flying records. The ground crews meet highest Government requirements. Irregular air carriers represented by Associated Airlines Agency flew over 100 million passenger miles during the past two years with a 100 per cent safety record.

The Solipsistic Muse

THE PISAN CANTOS, by Ezra Pound. (New Directions, $2.75.)

This, as I dare say you know, is the work for which Mr. Pound was made first recipient of the newly established Bollingen prize in poetry. The 10 cantos contained in the book were written at the time of the poet's confinement in the prison camp near Pisa; but organically—if it is possible to apply such a word to anything as disorganized as Mr. Pound's manner of writing—these are part of the larger opus upon which he has been laboring for 20 years. The anarchy of thought and idiom is not peculiar to the new cantos, but is characteristic of the whole work, and thus is hardly to be blamed upon the harsh treatment which Mr. Pound is said to have suffered at the hands of his American captors. The poems, however, do contain various references to his prison experiences, and also an acknowledgment, in what I take to be an accent of gratitude, of surreptitious kindnesses at the hands of certain Negro soldiers.

Here, as in the previous Cantos, the text is a pastiche in various languages including English, French, Italian, Spanish, Chinese, Latin and Greek. For reasons best known to the poet, and perhaps only to him, the Greek is set sometimes in small letters, sometimes in capitals, sometimes transliterated into Roman characters, sometimes given all three ways at once. There are many other typographical eccentricities, such as the absence of all punctuation except ellipse periods and quotation marks, and the use of various unconventional abbreviations. As for the import of Cantos, I must confess that a good deal of it eludes me; but then, as another poet has said, "A poem should not mean but be." The method seems to be a kind of free association in which Mr. Pound's somewhat nostalgic memories are interwoven with his impressions at the time of writing and with his general views of history, philosophy and mysticism and his notions of currency, credit and politics. In a general way I gather that bankers and money-lenders are to blame for whatever is wrong with the world. There are innumerable illusions, classical and contemporary, paradoxes, parodies, puns and conceits and idiosyncrasies of wit. Various characters turn up repeatedly for apparently no particular reason, among them Scotus Erigina, the two Yeats', father and son, and the three legendary emperors of the Chinese golden age, Yao, Shun and Yu.

If I remember correctly, neither the Dial award long ago to Mr. Eliot for The Waste Land nor the Nation's award to Mr. Eli Sigel for Hot Afternoons Have Been in Montana was the occasion of quite as much controversy as the Bollingen award to Mr. Pound. It is variously argued that Mr. Pound is unworthy of such an honor because he is a Fascist traitor, or because he is a madman, or because he is an anti-Semite, or because he is a bad poet, or because he is not a great poet, but merely an exciting one. Anticipating these objections, the jury of award has stated that "to permit other considerations than that of poetic achievement to sway the decision would in principle deny the validity of objective perception of value on which any civilized society must rest." Though the language of the statement suggests of a bench of justices rather than a galaxy of gifted poets, I am inclined to agree that in such a matter the poem is a better basis of judgment than the private character or the political prejudices of the poet. Whether Mr. Pound was actually guilty of treasonous conduct within the constitutional definition is a matter that probably will never be decided. I remember having heard one or two of Mr. Pound's propaganda speeches by short wave radio. Since I could make no sense of them whatever, it is difficult for me to believe that they were of any great aid to the enemy. Whether they were of comfort is another matter. Some men are comforted by the admiration of poets, and in these Cantos Mr. Pound's admiration of the late Mussolini is still undisguised. Nor would it be difficult to find passages to support the imputation of anti-Semitism. In Mr. Pound's case this attitude seems to be based upon a reading of the Old Testament and in particular the nineteenth chapter of Leviticus, which he seems to consider a list of accusations, rather than of commandments, and the poet refers to Prophet David in the terms employed by Mr. Truman against his journalistic critics. ("Not out at interest said David rex the prime s.o.b.") Still, it might be difficult to prove that Mr. Pound's anti-Semitism is any more intense than, say, Milton's anti-Catholicism or Samuel Butler's anti-Puritanism, making allowances, of course, for the differences of idiom.

What really confuses and disturbs me about the Bollingen business is the part about the "objective perception of value." If the jury knows of an objective test of greatness in poetry it has no right, I think, to keep it to itself. I believe I have said before that I know of only one such test, which is, of course, that of universal recognition, independent of time and fashion, but this is a matter of which the jurors are hardly better qualified than the rest of us to determine. Yet it seems to me most of the poetry written nowadays represents the contradiction of this principle. Since the day of the symbolists the rule has seemed to be that the fewer the readers the greater the poem, and that a truly great poem is one that is fully understood by nobody save the poet. If this is the test, then Mr. Pound is qualified with all honors. No poet who wished to be read would write in so many dialects, and surely none who wished to be understood by posterity would pack his poem with so many topical allusions.

Today And Tomorrow

Mr. Mayhew And British Recovery

DURING the hearings on ECA, which were conducted by Senator Connally and Representative Bloom, some, who know the score, were left with the feeling that it was all much too easy. Neither Congress nor the country got from the hearings anything like a true picture of the real difficulties of the recovery program. The committees invited, and in consequence they got, a presentation in which the grave problems that European statesmen are facing were pleasantly obscured by enthusiastic salesmanship and unimpeachable sentiments about the cold war.

LIPPMANN

No wonder, then, that Mr. Mayhew's comments about British recovery were so completely misunderstood, so completely that the President was asked at his press conference whether Marshall aid to Britain need continue in view of Mr. Mayhew's statement "that Britain has now virtually completed its economic recovery."

WHAT Mr. Mayhew meant to say was that during the last six months of 1948 the United Kingdom exported almost as many goods and services as she imported. In that sense Britain is within sight of "balancing" her foreign trade.

But though the achievement is remarkable, reflecting the highest credit upon the British people, it is wholly misleading to make it appear that Britain has "recovered" and has reached the objective of the Marshall Plan.

FOR WHEN the "balance" that Mr. Mayhew was talking about is examined, it shows that Britain still has a deficit with the dollar area (roughly speaking with North America) of about 1200 million dollars a year. That is to say Britain is still buying much more from the dollar area than she can pay for; the deficit is covered by the ECA subsidy.

However, to those parts of the world where dollars are not the currency, Britain is exporting about 300 million pounds worth of goods and services more than she imports. The 300 million pound surplus, if it could be converted into dollars at four dollars to the pound, would "balance" her deficit with North America. But the crux of the problem is that the 300 million pounds cannot in fact be converted into the 1200 million dollars, that theoretically they are worth.

THE REAL situation is, therefore, that Britain is getting from the dollar area much more than she can pay for in dollars. And at the same time the non-dollar area is getting much more from Britain than it can pay for in sterling. If one could forget about money and think only of goods, it could be said, broadly speaking, that a large part of what America is exporting free to Britain is being passed on by Britain to other countries.

Thus the other Marshall Plan countries are getting the equivalent of 480 million dollars of British goods under the European payments scheme. Britain does not receive goods in return: in part what she gets is a reduction of her old debts. In part she is running a little Marshall Plan of her own.

Something like 400 million dollars' worth of British goods are going to countries like India, Egypt, the Argentine, which are not participating in the Marshall Plan but share in it indirectly nevertheless.

Finally, about the equivalent of 300 million dollars more of British goods are being sent abroad as new investments.

IN THE LIGHT of all this it can be said that Britain is within sight of what may be called a moral recovery of her independence. That is to say she is not living on charity. Her people are producing nearly as much as they consume. But, as the 1200-million-dollar deficit shows, she does not have financial independence. Moreover, though she has hopes of coming near financial independence during the life of ECA, the statistical estimates on which the hope is founded are known and are admitted to be optimistic.

Therefore, no one should delude himself into thinking that the success of ECA is assured, or that at the end of it, the goal of the Marshall Plan will have been reached.

The interim report of the Marshall Plan countries is quite frank about it. This year they hope to pay for about half their imports from the outside world. Next year they hope to pay for about three fifths. Two years later they hope to pay for over nine tenths. "This," says the report, "is the size of the task"—to rise in three years from paying for only 60 per cent to paying for 94 per cent of their imports. "In those terms," the report adds drily, "the recovery program is only at its beginning."

Matter Of Fact

The Senate Girds For Battle

THE POSTELECTION honeymoon, which has been a pretty acrimonious affair anyway, is now about to end with a loud bang. The Administration leaders in the Senate have decided, with shuddering reluctance, to invite the head-on collision with the Southern Democrats which was bound to come sooner or later. The collision seems likely to take place almost immediately, with results no one can forsee.

A number of developments have made it almost inevitable that the battle will now be joined. In the first place, President Truman has flatly refused to entertain any idea of compromise on his civil rights program, although some of his friends have timidly suggested that a little backing down might be prudent.

Moreover, the Southerners have pretty well made up their minds to reject the sort of gentlemanly filibuster which Democratic leader Scott Lucas was hoping for. He hoped that the Southerners would filibuster on the civil rights issue merely for the record, gracefully allowing important Administration bills to come up for consideration from time to time. But this on-again, off-again version of the filibuster would remove its sting, and the Southerners are expected to have none of it.

MEANWHILE, there has been a great deal of pressure on the Administration leaders, and particularly on Lucas, who has been notably unenthusiastic, to defy Southern rage and really bite the civil rights bullet. Jake Arvey, powerful boss from Illinois, Lucas' home State, came to Washington last week for the Jefferson-Jackson rally. In the course of his visit Arvey told Lucas that any shilly-shallying on the civil rights program would be viewed with extreme disfavor.

A delegation of Northern Democrats, including Pennsylvania's Senator Francis Myers and Connecticut's Brien McMahon, met Lucas last week, and came out flat-footed for a policy of full steam ahead and devil take the Southerners. Lobbyists for the CIO, which has suddenly discovered that Taft-Hartley repeal is not the only issue before Congress, and for Americans for Democratic Action, have also been button-holing Senate Democrats and demanding an all-out fight on the civil rights issue.

The result of all this is that Lucas and the Administration Senators are now preparing really to join battle with the Southerners. Moreover, Vice President Alben Barkley is expected to reverse his predecessor, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, by ruling that cloture can be applied on a motion before a bill or resolution is formally taken up by the Senate. This will have all sorts of complicated parliamentary consequences. But in the end it seems certain to lead to a filibuster by the Southerners, and a determined attempt, supported by the Administration, to silence them by applying cloture.

THIS PROSPECT really pleases almost nobody. The Southerners are of course unhappy, since there is a fair chance that a good deal of the civil rights program will become law. Even the Republicans are not entirely gleeful. If Barkley reverses the Vandenberg ruling on cloture, the Republicans are likely to be faced with the unpleasant choice of seeming to repudiate Vandenberg, or else of seeming to oppose civil rights.

Yet in their embarrassment, the Republicans can find plenty of consolation in the misery of the Democratic leaders who are supposed to steer Truman's whole Fair Deal program through Congress. For even if there were no civil rights issue, this task would be no easy one. The Administration does not have a real parliamentary majority for the most important parts of its domestic program, including Taft-Hartley repeal, four billion dollars in increased taxes, inflation control and great extension of social security.

To get this legislation through Congress in anything like the original Truman version would require, under any circumstances, adroit strategy and a liberal use of the patronage whip. With the Southern Democrats in a purple-faced, fist-shaking rage, it is hard to see how the Administration can count on a safe majority on any but the least controversial issues.

Yet Truman and the men around him still exude confidence. Truman is determined to fight for the substance of his program, even if it takes all summer. He will have enthusiastic allies, including the CIO leaders. A CIO delegation will soon visit the White House to discuss with Truman ways to use "political action" techniques to drum up support for the Fair Deal.

IT CAN BE ARGUED that the battle royal between the Administration and the Southerners was bound to come, anyway, and it is as well to get it over with. At any rate, a spark of life seems likely to be injected into what has so far been a remarkably corpse-like session of Congress.

Retailers Call for Relaxation Of Installment Buying Rules

Reduced cash outlay and longer periods of monthly payment on installment sales were urged last night by the National Retail Credit Association.

The retail group released a resolution adopted last week at a Statler Hotel conference requesting the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System to "modify and liberalize" Regulation W, which expires June 30.

The war-imposed Regulation W regulates consumer installment credit sales.

Counsel for the association will ask Federal Reserve to:

1. Continue the existing requirement of one third down payment on automobile purchases, but extend the period for subsequent payments from 18 to 24 months.

2. Reduce initial cash outlay from 20 per cent to 15 per cent on installment buying of such merchandise as furniture, radios, television sets, washing machines and refrigerators, and extend time of payment from 15 to 18 months on purchases of $1000 or less and allow 24 months to meet the unpaid balance on items over $1000.

The resolution recommended that the above modifications be put into effect immediately.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., FEB. 27.—In dignified contrast to Ed Klieman, the pitcher who yelled bloody murder when he was traded from the pennant-winning Indians to the seventh-place Nats last December, first baseman Ed Robinson is highly contented.

POVICH

Robinson, who got the same treatment from the Cleveland club, says he likes the whole idea. It was nice to pick up that $6700 World Series check for playing with the Indians, he readily confesses, but he never was wedded to the idea of playing for Manager Lou Boudreau.

They just didn't get along, Robinson admits. There were vague reports last season of an incident in which Boudreau got tough and ordered Robinson out of uniform. When he was asked today about "that incident," Robby said "which one are you referring to?" Thus he implied that he he had more than one brush with Boudreau.

"Just say we didn't hit it off, I guess," said Robinson. "Boudreau is a wonderful ball player. He won a pennant and lots of people like him. The fact that I don't is unimportant, except to me."

ROBINSON'S chief gripe against Boudreau, he says, was "the times he benched me without warning. I though I was the regular first baseman, but I never knew until just before the game whether I'd be playing that day.

"Boudreau benched me for 10 days during one spell and then he put me in for Walt Judnich as a defensive measure at first base with the score tied in the eighth. It was still tied in the twelfth when I broke the game up with a single. I thought I had my job back, but the next day I was on the bench again."

When the chips were down in the last six days of the season with the Indians, Yankees and Red Sox all tied up for the lead Boudreau did call Robby off the bench for the stretch drive. And in the World Series, the only Cleveland player to top his .300 average was Larry Doby. Despite his .254 batting average, he thought he had a pretty good year, leading the rest of the league's first basemen in homers with 16.

HIS PRESENCE with the Washington club is no long coincidence. Clarke Griffith first admired Robinson's first-basing and power hitting when he saw him with the Baltimore Orioles. Those were the days when the Cleveland club claimed him for $10,000 under a working agreement with the Orioles who yelped that on the open market he'd have brought $100,000.

Griffith saw much of him at the Norfolk Naval Training Station in 1942-43. Mickey Vernon was also stationed at Norfolk, but the folks there were so smitten with Robinson's power hitting that Vernon was farmed out to the Naval Air Base club.

The ball players never had it so good as at Norfolk, Robinson remembered. "The skipper, Capt. McClure, ordered three baseball uniforms fo revery man, and I had three dozen bats of my own model. He even outfitted the club's dugout with upholstered leather seats that tilted back and let you rest your feet on the steps. It was wonderful duty."

ROBINSON IS predicting no pennant for the Nats, naturally enough, but he does think they are an underrated ball club. "The Washington pitchers always looked tough to me. I didn't get a hit off Sid Hudson all season, and it's hard to believe they lost all those games. All last season, the Indians always thought Washington was a tough club that you couldn't let up against."

There's a tremendous doubt in Robinson's mind that the Indians will win the pennant again. He wonders if their infield will have the same good year. "Joe Gordon, Boudreau and Ken Keltner put together the best seasons of their careers in 1948, and we barely did get home. Who can say they'll do it all over again?"

The Cleveland infield, Robby points out, drove in most of the club's runs last year. He personally batted in 83, playing only in 125 games, and 10 of those were as a pinch hitter. "When you remember that Larry Doby, our best outfielder, drove in only 60 runs last season, you have to say that the Indians were weak in the outfield, and will have to do better to repeat."

Alley Managers Go All Out For Entries in Last Two Days

Attention, all bowlers!

Only two more days and nights remain in the third annual Washington Post Bowling Tournament.

You still have today and tomorrow to enter. Don't fail your operator, floor man or a member of the women's auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club when one approaches you to enter.

The Police Boys Clubs will be beneficiaries of one half of the 50 cents entry fees to help in their drive for $250,000. The other 25 cents goes into the prize fund.

Through yesterday some 10,000 had entered the popular competition which opened on February 14. All operators have been requested by Co-Chairmen Julie Singer and Hap Newman to go all-out in the last two days.

Scratch for men is 128 and for women 118. Full handicaps prevail.

Mount Rainier alleys put in their challenge as Don Galloway, of the Mount Rainer Methodist Church League rolled a 400-90—490. Galloway was in his best form as he rolled games of 138-152-110.

In the special Police Boys' Club match at Penn Recreation Center over the weekend, Civil Aeronautics Administration beat the Civil Aeronautics Board by a 90-pin margin.

The race to see who will produce the greatest number of entries still continues red hot, with Hap Newman's Ice Palace holding a slight lead over Lou Kramer's Penn, and with Hi-Skor's Eddie Winslow promising to catch both before the big event ends Tuesday night.

All have promised to do more than 1000, each. One of the best jobs is being done by the six-alley Government Printing Office, which has some 300 entries.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP). Pete Harris, who retired from professional baseball some 20 years ago, today won the tenth annual national baseball players' golf tournament with a 36-hole total of 142.

Harris, a "twice-a-month" golfer who'd rather go fishing, carded a 70—two under par—today to add to his opening round of 72 and finished nine strokes in front of big Paul Derringer, former Cincinnati Reds pitcher, who came in with a 79 for 151.

Paul Ryder, former Tallahassee, Fla., player, was third at 153.

Harris played baseball with Nashville, Columbus, Grand Rapids and London, Ont.

Griff Holds Out for Five Pay Slashes

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27.—Spring training's start is still two days away for the Nats, but the club's front office has already undergone a hardening process. And the players are feeling it in their paychecks.

Three pitchers, an infielder and a catcher are still unsigned and the reason in every case is a salary cutback that they are trying to duck.

President Clark Griffith, in training here for two months to whip his salary list into shape, has cracked down on Walter Masterson, Sid Hudson, Mickey Haefner, Mark Christman and Al Evans.

The cuts he has proposed aren't big, and the quintet of slashes will probably sign after a little more than token resistance. But it represents the end of what has been the automatic raise in the industry.

Evans Pointed Case

Griffith this year is taking the old-fashioned view that the ball player who has a poor season ought to be cut. That's his stand in the cases of Pitchers Walter Masterson, Sid Hudson and Mickey Haefner. They're all yelping about reductions.

Masterson was given a raise after he won 17 games in 1947 and is holding out for the same salary this year after losing 15 and winning only eight. He won't get it. Hudson got a revision downward after winning only four and losing 16. Haefner was cut for his dull performance of 5-13 last season.

The case of Catcher Al Evans is more in point, perhaps. Evans can't understand why, after hitting 20 more points than he did two years ago, he is being asked to take a cut. But he hit only .259 in 1948, which is not impressive, and is no longer in the good bargaining position of being the only veteran catcher on the club. Jake Early is back to challenge him for the job.

Mark Christman is balking at a slash in the $10,000 salary he drew last season. Griffith claims "that's too much" for a utility man, and it may be, but Christman has a special advantage in the bargaining. He's the only man on the roster who has firstbase experience with which to spell Ed Robinson in an emergency.

Subsistence Setup Revised

The Nats 'training camp scene here is a growing community. Despite the fact that the squad is not supposed to report until Tuesday for its first workout, more than 15 players are already on the scene. The squad will be swelled to 40 when the infielders and outfielders report on March 5.

The front office is getting tighter with the players in another respect.

In former seasons, all players who chose to live away from the hotel with their families were given subsistence money equivalent to their room and meals bill at the hotel. This year, if they live outside of headquarters, they receive only meal money.

Mikan Stopped, Fort Wayne Pastes Lakers

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 27 (AP).—Fort Wayne bottled up big George Mikan and whipped the Minneapolis Lakers, 75-50, in a Basketball Association of America game here tonight.

Mikan, who got 53 points last night against Baltimore, was held to a single field goal in each half by two piston players, Bill Henry and John Mahnken.

Big George played all but five minutes and managed to add ten points from the foul line.

Hickey Blasts Tampering

NBL Will Get Ed MacAuley Over His Coach's 'Dead Body'

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (AP).—Eddie Hickey, St. Louis University basketball coach, last night lashed out at the National Basketball League and declared the professional loop would get MacAuley "over my dead body."

Hickey's remarks came after Oklahoma A. and M. defeated the Billikens, 40 to 37, giving the Aggies their second victory of the year over St. Louis and virtually cinching their second Missouri Valley Conference crown in two years.

Last week the N.B.L.'s Commissioner Doxie Moore came to town and commented publicly that his league would pay Easy Ed, the Bills' star center, the highest salary in pro basketball to get him on an N.B.L. team.

Last night Macauley sank only 7 points, six of them in the first half, before he went out on fouls.

In his rebuke Hickey said:

"I think it's a crime against American intercollegiate athletics to have the coaches and commissioners of professional teams approach one of your players just before your biggest and most crucial game. And if the National Basketball League and Doxie Moore get MacAuley, it will be over my dead body.

Hickey put part of the blame for the defeat on himself when he said he didn't shift MacAuley to guard Forward Jack Shelton soon enough. Shelton was the outstanding player of the game with his 15 points for the Aggies.

The St. Louis Bombers, a Basketball Association of America team, also have had their eyes on MacAuley, but a spokesman for the local pro club said they have made no effort to contact Ed until the college season ends.

Chandler Quoted as Blaming Gardella

Suit Reported Closing Door on "Jumpers"

Boston, Feb. 27 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler was quoted yesterday as saying "it is impossible" for him to reprieve 18 players who jumped to the Mexican League in 1946 because of the Danny Gardella suit.

Chandler was quoted in an exclusive interview at Miami, Fla., with Hy Hurwitz of the Boston Globe sports staff.

"I was all set to lift the ban," Hurwitz quoted Chandler, "until the Gardella ruling was handed down a couple of weeks ago. Now it's impossible for me to allow the players back into baseball."

Chandler told Hurwitz "if they had all asked a reprieve, I was going to let them back in. But now I can't do anything until the Gardella case is settled."

Queried on the Globe story by the Associated Press Chandler said "I have no comment. Obviously I cannot comment on that matter one way or the other."

The Miami bureau also said that the commissioner had left for Sarasota where he had a reported "important meeting" scheduled for tomorrow.

Gardella, former New York Giant outfielder, brought suit to recover lost salary, claiming the reserve clause in baseball contracts is unconstitutional. Gardella was one of the players banned from organized baseball for "jumping" to the Mexican League.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals recently ordered a reopening of the case after an adverse ruling in lower court.

The day after the court's ruling, Mickey Owen, former Brooklyn who jumped to the Mexican League, voiced the hope that Gardella loses his suit.

Owen revealed that for three weeks prior to the court's decision he had traveled 8000 miles contacting other expelled jumpers.

He said that every one of them except Gardella had signed an appeal for reinstatement to organized baseball. He admitted that he was spurred to round up the signatures of the jumpers following a visit with Chandler.

"He (Chandler) was sympathetic and interested. He said I was the first of the suspended players to sign an appeal for immediate reinstatement," Mickey reported at the time.

Edwards, Mims Fight Tonight At Turner's

When Garland Edwards and Holly Mims clash tonight at Turner's Arena in the nine-round feature of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club benefit show, they will be battling for a spot on Gabe Menendez' middleweight elimination tournament.

The Turner's Arena matchmaker said the winner of this tiff will be matched with either Ken Stribling or Johnny Hansbury in one of the matches Gabe has designed to produce a warm weather opponent for a top ranking middleweight.

Holly, in scoring a tight verdict over Edwards two weeks back, handed the clever, hard-hitting lad his first set back in 15 pro encounters. Mims himself has dropped but two in 18, one to Garland, and reversed both.

An eight rounder which is commanding almost as much interest as the headliner is that between "Sonnyboy" Bunn, winner of 19 of 22, and Mike Koballa, Pittsburgh welterweight who has taken twenty straight.

Another eight pairs Johnny Arduini, former National A.A.U. king, with Jerry Cartwright, erstwhile New York Golden Gloves titlist, in a bantam fray. Johnny has lost three in 25 as a pro.

Caps Play Stags In Chicago Tonight

Needing only one victory to clinch the BAA's Eastern title, the Caps go after it tonight in Chicago against the Stags, 103-90 conquerors of the Caps here Saturday.

Tonight's tilt launches a four-game slate for the Caps this week. They move over to Rochester Tuesday, return home against St. Louis Wednesday and face the Stags again here Saturday.

Haight Reminisces

Old Pimlico May Go But Ghosts Will Stay

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

A HOUSING PROJECT will arise, so I'm told, on the site of the ancient Pimlico race track, due to be abandoned after this year.

Haight

Bedroom, kitchen and bath will supplant stall, hayrack and hot-water bucket, and another community will come into being. Life will go on there just as it does in thousands of similar areas.

In the morning washing machines will purr, vacuum cleaners will buzz and the laundryman's truck will come to a screeching stop at the curb. After school the voices of children at play will enliven the neighborhood.

Early evening will bring forth the blare of the radio, perhaps the cry of an unburped baby or the rattle of poker chips or the churn of an auto starter or any of the other sounds that go with a heap of living, the American way.

On still nights, however, restless sleepers will hear strange sounds like the ring of a bell and the clatter of hooves and, like as not, Pop will swear the next day that he saw horses thundering down the street and banking into the next block and Mom will insist he cut down on his beer.

Junior's parents will wonder if they shouldn't see the doctor about the boy's bad dreams when he insists that long, shiny gray animals bounded over the backyard fences outside his window.

An elderly matron, peering from behind the living room curtains, will see crowds of wasp-waisted ladies and silk-hatted gentlemen milling through the gathering dusk, only to disappear when the street lights are turned on.

ON A COLD, blustery winter's night, the howl of the wind will turn into a rolling thunder of voices which will reach a crescendo if no one opens the front door.

Yes, the ghosts and spirits of old Pimlico have much to reenact in the few nocturnal hours assigned them.

For instance, there's the cool October day in 1877 when Congress adjourned for the Great Baltimore Sweepstakes to watch Parole, Ten Broeck and Tom Ochiltree battle it out.

There's the Dinner Party Stakes of 1871 with a gallant steed named Preakness charging to a victory that was to perpetuate his name for all time.

There's the first Preakness, in 1873, with Survivor, Jockey Barbee sitting straight up and rigid as a park policeman, giving his all to beat John Boulger and Artist.

The Preakness of 1875, in which Tom Ochiltree made his comeback and thereby earned the right to have the weather vane, atop the old clubhouse, painted in the Chamberlain colors which was the custom.

The Dixie Handicap, a race that outdates both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, of 1873 when Tom Bowling surged through a sea of mud to win and, oddly enough, had a jockey named Swim.

Or the same race in 1888 when Jockey Hayward refused to take defeat and brought Taragon from last position to win going away over Marauder and Tea Tray, the ultra-ultra in Eastern horseflesh at the time.

THE FAMOUS COLORS of Commander J. K. L. Ross flying to the front and staying there in the 1916 Preakness while worn by Jockey Poney McAtee aboard Damrosch, a 14-1 shot.

Man O'War's Preakness of 1920, with Clarence Kummer aboard and the performance that made Owner Samuel D. Riddle wish he had named Big Red for the Derby.

All these and many other races are on the agenda, including those of Seabiscuit, War Admiral, Citation, Alsab, Count Fleet, Challedon, Gallant Fox, Nellie Flag, Aneroid, Victorian, Bostonian and many others.

Some day, in the far distant future, scientists tell us that the last quiver of radio activity will be extracted from atom-bombed Bikini Atoll.

If you are around at the time, you can bet your bottom dollar that, on clear, dark nights, phantom thoroughbreds still will be heard gamboling along the Pimlico stretch.

Catholic Meets Bridgewater In Tournament

Play in the annual Mason-Dixon Conference basketball tournament opens at Catholic University Tuesday with eight teams scrapping for the title now owned by Loyola of Baltimore.

The last two entries decided on the final night of play, Saturday.

Western Maryland made the grade, walloping Johns Hopkins, 82-63, to wind up the regular campaign in seventh place with 8 wins in 16 games.

The other last-minute qualifier was Catholic University, which grabbed off eighth place despite its 50-43 setback at the hands of Mount St. Mary's. The Cardinals won 8 of 17 loop starts.

Washington College could have eased Catholic U out of the playoff picture by beating Loyola, but the Shoremen dropped a 56-53 decision for their eighth loss in 14 games and wound up in the ninth slot. Catholic meets Bridgewater in the first round. First-round pairings:

Hampden-Sydney in Washington Tuesday (5:30 p. m.) against Mount St. Mary's; Catholic U. against Bridgewater (7:05 p. m.); American University against Western Maryland (8:40 p. m.), and Loyala, the defending champion, against Roanoke (10:15 p. m.).

Terps Face Tar Heels in First Round

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Fourth-seeded George Washington drew unseeded South Carolina while slightly regarded Maryland was pitted against North Carolina in the opening games of the Southern Conference basketball tournament at Durahm, N. C., Thursday.

The Colonials launch the three-day dribble derby at 2:15 p. m. against the Gamecocks, whom they wrecked by 30 points three weeks ago. Two hours later Maryland bows in, and probably out, against a Tar Heel team which thrashed the Terrapins twice during the regular season.

N. C. State vs. Wake Forest

As expected, powerful North Carolina State, seeking its third straight league championship, was top seeded, but the Wolfpack is expected to have a fight on its hands in its opening battle. Coach Everett Case's aces were paired off against Wake Forest, the team that broke State's 27-game conferance streak three weeks ago.

Second-seeded William and Mary, featuring high-scoring Center Chet Giermak, trades baskets with Davidson in the other first round engagement, which follows the 7 p. m. State-Wake-Forest tiff.

N. C. State's "Hoosier Hot Shots" are prohibitive favorites to tuck away the title. They finished the regular season with 14 triumphs in 15 outings. The transplanted Indiana shotmakers avenged their 52-49 upset to Wake Forest by pasting an 82-39 defeat on the Deacons the following week.

GW in Upper Bracket

George Washington, not in the same bracket with State, furnished the Wolfpack with its closest game except for the Wake Forest upset. The Carolinians squeezed by State, 60-59, at the National Guard Armory here last month...

...The Colonials are in the upper bracket and if they eliminate South Carolina, as expected, they tangle with the winner of the William and Mary-Davidson skirmish in the semifinals Friday. The winner of the Maryland-North Carolina clash faces the winner of the N. C. State-Wake Forest brush.

Finals will be held Saturday night at 9 p. m. All games will be played in Duke's Indoor Stadium.

REBOUNDS—The tournament not only decides the Conference's basketball championship, but the football story-telling title as well. Every football coach in the league converges on Durham for the weekend to rehash, re-live and replay their seasons. . . . The tourney will probably be shifted to Raleigh next season with N. C. State as host. The 12,000 capacity Wolfpack house will be completed by then. . . . G. W. has the third best defensive record of the eight competing teams. The Colonials permitted 13 opponents 49.5 points compared to the 46.3 the Wolfpack defense allowed. . . . Duke, host to the tournament, won't be represented for the first time in over 22 years. The Blue Devils finished with only five triumphs in a dozen league forays. . . . The Southern Conference Sports Writers Association hold their annual jamboree in connection with the tourney.

Terps Play VMI Tonight

George Washington and Maryland ring down the curtain on the Southern Conference regular season activity tonight and tomorrow against Virginia Military Institute.

The Terps get first crack at the hapless Keydets, meeting them this evening at College Park. Game time is 8:15. Tuesday night, the Colonials face the visitors at the National Guard Armory at the same time.

Laker, Bullet Game Results In 5 Records

Baltimore, Feb. 27 (AP).—The Basketball Association of America record book is out of date today.

Big George Mikan, the Minneapolis Lakers and the Baltimore Bullets teamed up last night to write five new marks into the book and erase numerous local Coliseum records. The Lakers won the wild double-overtime contest, 115-114.

Here are the new league records set in the free-scoring tussle:

1. Minneapolis sank 51 out of 63 free throws to top the 43 out of 51 mark set by Washington February 9.

2. The officials called 97 personal fouls. The old mark was 91 established in a game between Washington and Rochester, also February 9.

3. Seven Bullets were put out on fouls to top the previous high of six banished from the Fort Wayne team.

4. Fifty-five personals were called against Baltimore. Rochester had 46 called against it for the previous high, also on February 9.

5. And last, but not least, the total score of 229 points was 10 better than the total of 219 piled up by Providence and Chicago, January 4.

Mikan, bespectacled BAA scoring leader, boosted his personal total to 1411 points with his 53-point spree. That's the second-best single-game effort in the league's three-year history. Joe Fulks of Philadelphia holds the record with 63.

The 6-foot-10 Mikan also equaled his own scoring record, registered in his collegiate days at DePaul in a Madison Square Garden game against Rhode Island State in 1945.

Sports Show Lists Log-Rolling Next Saturday

A lesson in log-rolling will be given next Saturday in the Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show at National Guard Armory with the Stauber brothers, Joe and Charlie, of Menominee, Wis., doing the instructing.

Specifically, they'll show just how easy it is to remain upright on twisting, turning, slippery logs in the water, all of this in the huge tank and stage show which will highlight the program twice daily.

In winning the Wisconsin State championship Joe Stauber took an estimated 16,000 steps during 2 hours and 15 minutes to outlast his opponents before hitting the water.

St. John's Routs La Salle, 56 to 17

St. John's defeated LaSalle High of Cumberland yesterday at the St. John's gym, 56-17. Don Kokes was high scorer with 12 points.

This was St. John's last game before the Metro tournament and gives the Johnnies a 21-4 record for the season.

Cary Picks Up $2000, Bob $1000

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 27 (AP).—Cary Middlecoff, the dentist who quit pulling molars in favor of pulling down cash on the golf trail, staged a great comeback today to capture first money in the $10,000 Rio Grande Valley Open with a 72-hole score of 267.

Middlecoff, leader at the three quarters mark with 197, was tottering as he finished the first nine in one over par 36 today. But he gritted his teeth, dug in and came sweeping home over the mud-caked Harlingen Municipal course with a 2-under-par 34 that gave him a two-stroke victory over big Bob Hamilton, playing pro of Prince Georges Country Club, Landover, Md.

Middlecoff had rounds of 68, 66, 63 and 70 on the 6095-yard par 35, 36—71 course.

Harrison Third

It was the Memphis dentist's first tournament victory since November of 1948 when he captured first money in the Hawaiian Open.

Middlecoff won $2000 to bring his earnings for the year to $4656.66 and send him well up with the leaders.

Hamilton closed with a three-under-par 68 for 269, winning $1400. Dutch Harrison of Little Rock was third with 270 on the strength of a 67 today and received $1000.

Tied for fourth were Skip Alexander, from Southern Pines, N. C., and Ky Laffoon of St. Andrews, Ill. Each won $750. They had 272, both shooting a 70 today.

Demaret Top Earner

Hamilton's putter was working like a charm on his last round. He had trouble on three holes—No. 8 where his drive stopped behind a tree and he had to take three to get in No. 6 while he three-putted and No. 11, where he three-putted 14 feet to go one over. But his birdie holes were like this: No. 3, a 2-footer; No. 4, 12-footer; No. 9, 4-footer; No. 15, 3-footer; No. 16, a 20-footer, and No. 17, a 30-footer.

Tied at 273 were Fred Haas, jr., Jimmy Demaret, and Jim Turnesa, each winning 520. Demaret's earnings put him back as the leading money winner of the year, replacing Lloyd Mangrum who failed to finish in the clash. Demaret now has $6382 and Mangrum $6170.

On Heels of Metz Row

PGA and Tourney Sponsors May Pro Rate Golfers' Prizes According to Days Played

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 27 (AP).—There were indications today that some changes will be made in the agreement between the Professional Golfers Association and tournament sponsors.

Recommendations submitted by Austin Anson, manager of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Growers and Shippers Association, sponsor of the $10,000 Rio Grande Valley Tournament, would revise the plan under which the PGA and sponsors now operate to insure both sponsors and golfers against loss.

These recommendations came on the heels of golf's latest flare-up in which Dick Metz, veteran professional, was accused of reporting disagreements between sponsors and the PGA. But George Schneiter, manager of the PGA Tournament Bureau, and Anson, said this had no relation to the Metz matter.

Dick Peebles, sports editor of the San Antonio Express who wrote a column in which he told of disagreements between sponsors and golf, named Metz as his informant.

The only way the local tournament was involved in the column was that a number of the players went to Mexico City to play in the National Mexican Open, Schneiter said. Anson stated emphatically that the Rio Grande Valley tournament sponsors did not object to the players going to Mexico City, in fact approved it.

Anson, previous to submitting his recommendation to Schneiter, said Metz had called him from Arkansas City, Kans., with a denial that he had given the information. Peebles countered with the statement that Metz gave him most of the information in the presence of two other golfers.

Anson's recommendation to the PGA was that if a tournament is rained out the sponsors pay money winnings on the basis of what is played.

For instance, if a tournament is rained out after the first round, the leaders at that period of the tournament would receive one fourth the prize money originally put up.

If rain causes a round to be carried over to another day, thus prolonging the tournament, Anson suggested that the prize money be scaled down and enough money provided to pay expenses of the players finishing in the money, for staying over.

Second Desperado Killed in Battle

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 27 (AP).—Desperado Bill Ray Gilbert, 28, was shot to death tonight while resisting arrest.

Gilbert was trapped in a Phoenix auto court. Sheriffs' deputies, police and Federal agents were in on the fight.

Gilbert, sought in a triple slaying in California, had been quoted previously as boasting that he would never be taken alive. He boasted, too, that he would kill two policemen.

One was shot in the leg in tonight's gun battle.

Desk Sergt. Claude E. Burk of the Phoenix police department confirmed the death of Gilbert.

Earlier two rookie policemen captured Gilbert's companion, the two-gun badman George Adolph Scmid, a former convict. He had two pistols in his belt but offered no resistance.

"I'm glad its over," he told his captors.

Schmid and Gilbert are charged with killing a woman and two men near Needles.

Foray Described

Deputy County Attorney Tony Jones said Schmidt admitted joining Gilbert, his prison cellmate, on a foray in which a Phoenix woman was kidnaped, the three Californians were slain, and a Phoenix service station was held up.

Cold-bloodedly shot down were Ernest Winsted, 21, Needles City employe; his wife, Frances, 22, and their neighbor, Willis Pugh, 70.

"Gilbert did the shooting; I didn't fire a shot," Schmid told Jones.

Schmid was seized five blocks from his mother's home by two policemen in a patrol car, who were alerted by a motorist.

Schmid also admitted, Jones said, that he and Gilbert kidnaped Florence Margaret Chisholm, 31, last Tuesday from the Phoenix riding stable she managed.

Miss Chisholm, who eluded Gilbert Friday night, already had told of witnessing the killings. She said Gilbert fired all the shots but one, Schmid the other.

With Schmid in custody, a small army of sheriffs deputies, police and highway patrolmen concentrated on the hunt for Gilbert.

Start Meat Diet at Six Weeks for Better Babies, Report Advises Mothers

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—Babies who start to eat meat at the age of six weeks will have better blood, better sleep and better general physical condition than without meat, a new research report indicates.

Dr. H. W. Schultz, of Swift research laboratories, writing in the current National Livestock Producer, told of two years study to find out if tiny babies tolerate meat and if there are any healthful advantages to it.

"The protein requirement of a baby is actually three or four times, in proportion to his weight, that of an adult," Dr. Schultz said. "Our research was predicated upon the fact that meat is the best source of complete, high-quality protein."

In the feeding tests supervised by a pediatrician, one group of six-weeks-old babies received the customary bottle formula. Another group had small amounts of strained meats added to the formula. The meat was fine enough to go through the nipple of a nursing bottle. More meat was added daily until the protein content was increased by 25 per cent.

After eight weeks babies receiving meat showed an average hemoglobin of 113.3 per cent compared with 89.7 per cent for those without meat, an average red blood cell count of 122.2 per cent for those with meat and 106.2 per cent for those without. There were no stomach upsets from the meat-added diet.

"Meat-fed babies slept better, showed less tendency toward anemia, and were generally in a better physical condition than those receiving no meat supplement," the report said.

Pacific Collision Badly Damages Destroyer Escort

San Francisco, Feb. 27 (AP).—The destroyer escort Marsh was badly damaged in a collision with the destroyer Taussig during night maneuvers the night of February 22, Twelfth Naval District headquarters said today. There were no casualties.

The Marsh received an underwater gash in the forward section of her hull. The Navy described the damage as "extensive." There was only slight damage to the Taussig. Both ships now are in the naval shipyard here. Repairs to the Marsh will take a month to six weeks, the Navy said. A board of inquiry is hearing testimony.

Truman Club Unanimous For Morgan As D. C. Head

Committee's Action Affirmed at Meeting; Democrats Intend To Call on President

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., civic leader, won unanimous indorsement of the Washington Truman-Barkley Club yesterday to be District Commissioner, succeeding John Russell Young.

The action was taken at a breakfast meeting of the club at the Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, club chairman, explained that yesterday's vote affirmed indorsement of Morgan made in the name of the Truman-Barkley Club by its executive committee two weeks ago.

Commisisoner Young's third three-year term is due to expire May 17.

Leaders at Breakfast

Among the city Democratic leaders at the breakfast were Al L. Wheeler, chairman of the District Democratic Central Committee; James Bryan, also member of the District central committee; Benjamin Striner, past president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations; John James of the District Young Democrats Club; Walter H. Maloney of the Cathedral Heights Citizens Asosciation, although officially not representing that group, and Morgan, also a member of the American Businessmen's Association.

Discussion at the meeting, Smith said, "centered around the Morgan candidacy and high praise for Al Wheeler and other civic leaders on their recent efforts in the drive for passage of a home rule measure by Congress."

It was learned that James moved at the meeting that the Young Democrats Club also formally indorse Morgan for Commissioner. James said there was "strong and very definite sentiment" in favor of Morgan's candidacy within his group.

Expect to See Truman

The club's executive committee met later, but deferred action on the commissioner question until their next full meeting, two weeks hence, when new officers will be elected.

Meanwhile, the city's top Democratic leaders expect to meet with President Truman to inform him of the "fast growing party and civic support" for Morgan.

Speaking as a District resident and describing Morgan as "one of our neighborhood," Maloney said his Cathedral Heights Citizens Association will be urged by several members to indorse Morgan at their next meeting March 2.

Maloney commented: "Morgan, a lifelong, Washingtonian, both by experience and heritage, is a very logical man to be District Commissioner. He has always been in the forefront of our charity drives, the National Symphony, Cherry Blossom Festivals, sports events and the President's Cup Regatta—all the fine things that go to make up Washington life. In addition, he has a deep sincere interest in the home rule cause."

operates the Holober watch and jewelry repairing store at 1214 7th st. nw., said he last saw his son shortly after noon yesterday.

He described his son as a clerical helper, although "he could repair watches."

Holober reported to police Friday that his wife walked off with the baby Thursday night after their automobile became mired just off Route 673 on the driveway to the nudist camp.

The site where the bodies were found is about 200 yards from here the automobile was stuck. The fresh grave was 20 feet from the lodge house of the nudist camp.

One of the Washington detectives who was in the search party said police were told Holober was a member of the camp for nine years.

Half a dozen Fairfax County policemen, 21 Boy Scouts of Troop 181, Falls Church, and two detectives from the Metropolitan Police Missing Persons Bureau participated in the search yesterday morning.

About to Give Up

They were about to give up for the day at 5 p. m., and were assembling at the clearing around the lodge. At this point, several of the searchers noted that the ground they were standing on was unusually soft.

Digging about 6 inches, they came on the woman's body. Next to it was a woman's red plastic purse, and under this was the baby.

Earlier in the day, searchers found a shovel and a mattock in the brush along Route 673, across from the driveway entrance to the health resort lodge.

Detective Sergt. James K. Hunter, who joined the search, said that when the woman's husband was taken to the neighborhood of the lodge Saturday, Holober stood at one point directly on the grave of his wife and child.

Persons living in the area said the health resort is a nudist colony known as the Green Foresters Club. It is closed during the winter, it was said.

The resort is in a sparsely inhabited, wooded, area of northwestern Fairfax County. It is about a mile and a half from Route 608, the nearest paved highway and about 5 miles from Route 50.

According to the dead woman's father, Irving Garner, 931 New York ave. nw., she had been pregnant for more than two months.

He said his daughter was born in Washington, and attended the Gales School here. Until her marriage to Holober at Rockville, Md., in December 1947 she worked as a printer's assistant at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. After her marriage she worked for a short time, he said, at a White Tower hamburger shop at 11th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Garner will make official identification of the bodies this morning at Arlington Hospital, where they were taken yesterday.

An autopsy will be performed there this morning.

Took Them for a Ride

Holober reported the disappearance of his wife and child on Friday by telephone to the Missing Persons Bureau.

The next day, when questioned by police, he said that he borrowed his sister's automobile about 3 p. m. Thursday and took his wife and child for a ride in Virginia. After the car became bogged down in the mire, the couple sat and talked for several hours, he said, about personal matters.

Apparently after a disagreement, Mrs. Holober left with the baby. He said he asked her to come back, but she headed back toward Washington. Holober waited in the car all night, he said, hitch-hiking to the District next morning. He said he returned in the afternoon with a brother-in-law and a friend. They pulled the car free with a truck, he related.

Upon first checking at the scene, Fairfax police found no clew to the disappearance. There were no prints of a woman's shoes around the spot where the car was mired, police reported.

Police also searched the entire area Saturday, including the neighborhood of the lodge.

Lane Indicates Funds Asked By Byrd Face Further Cuts

Baltimore, Feb. 27 (AP).—The "urgent" construction program of the University of Maryland, already slashed to a shadow of the amount requested by Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, may be cut still further, Governor Lane indicated tonight.

"It is not so much a question as to whether the cuts recommended for the university should be restored as it is whether the amount allocated may have to be reduced still further," the Governor said.

He made the statement after conferring with John B. Funk, State engineer, on the State's capital improvement program.

Dr. Byrd asked for $20,913,392 when he submitted a construction program last fall. However, the State Planning Commission, of which the State engineer is a member, recommended projects totaling only $3,027,600.

The commission completely eliminated a 3,755,000 program proposed by Dr. Byrd for Princess Anne College for Negroes, and described by him at the time as the most urgent of the construction needs.

The Governor said his immediate concern is with the over-all picture of capital improvements in the State, and that he has given no detailed consideration to the recommendations regarding the University of Maryland.

"I am already committed to the program for the State mental hospitals," he said, "and for the construction program of the tuberculosis sanatoria. These alone aggregate something like 25 million dollars. When those commitments are met, it will be for me to determine how much more, in my opinion, the State can afford to spend for all other capital improvements."

Gwinn to Discuss Fiscal Program

John S. Cockrell, assistant executive secretary of the association, also said the group will consider proposals to increase liquor license and gallonage fees.

Visitor Uses Shotgun to End His Life

A 29-year-old Baltimore man, visiting an uncle and aunt here for the past month, ended his life with a shotgun blast in the basement of their home early yesterday.

He was Donald A. Reidy, who was found about 8:30 a. m. by his uncle, Harry R. Bryant, 3904 Ames st. ne. Police said Bryant reported that his nephew was seated on a couch in the basement recreation room, with the stock of a 20-gauge shotgun resting on the floor between his feet and the barrel pointing toward his chest.

One shot had been fired from the double-barreled gun, entering under Reidy's heart. He apparently had been dead several hours before he was found, police said. Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg issued a certificate of suicide.

Police said Reidy's mother and his wife, from whom he is separated, live in Baltimore and that he came to Washington about a month ago to stay with the Bryants.

Two notes, both addressed to his mother, in which he stated he was tired of living, were found on the dining room table in the Bryant home, according to police.

Island Republic Gives Independence Day Fete

By Marie McNair

The Dominican Embassy's red, white and blue flag flew over the embassy doorway yesterday, proclaiming the island's Independence Day.

Cole, called upon as general factotum at most of the town's big parties, was there, opening and closing doors of limousines, taxis and jalopies as they paused briefly on the driveway.

Certainly largest of yesterday's parties, it was only one, however, of at least four going on during the cocktail hours.

At Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy's party they cut a birthday cake for Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, who with Dr. Norris, had first come to the Dominican Embassy. Gen. and Mrs. Roland Walsh entertained yesterday. So did Dr. and Mrs. George Trible.

The Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen stood in the Victorian drawing room to welcome their guests, Senora de Thomen in a dark blue crepe frock with side drapery, a cluster of violets on her shoulder.

Among members of the embassy staff in the line were the Minister-Counselor Hans Cohn and Senora de Cohn, the Minister-Counselor and Senora de Vega and the Military Attache and Senora de Feliz.

Cakes Match Flag

Champagne corks popped from a bar in the dining room, another in the small panelled library. And in the ballroom, hams, turkeys, glace salmon, and red, white and blue iced petit fours were among tempting dishes on the long buffet.

I met the Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe Morgenstierne, and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, arriving as I left; saw the Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, sipping a Scotch on the sidelines, and glimpsed the Colombian Ambasador and Senora de Reatrepo and the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Martinez Vargas in the crowd.

The party yesterday was a farewell for Colonel and Senora de Murilla who leave Thursday for Cuba, and a welcome home to Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt, just back after a Caribbean cruise with visits to old friends along the way.

Mrs. Randolph Huntington Minor up and about again after an illness that kept her at home for several weeks, was searching for a familiar face. She found the Tom Burkes, Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson who live in the same building, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves.

The Argentine Ambassador, Jeronimo Remorino, was there, and the South African Ambassador, Harry Andrews, who's also been on the sick list, with pretty Mrs. Andrews.

Diplomats Attend

Saw the Luxembourg Minister, Hughes LeGallais, but not Mme. LeGallais; Senora de Castro, wife of the El Salvador Ambassador, but not the Ambassador. Met for the first time, Mrs. William T. Clement, whose husband, the general, is a patient at the Naval hospital, and who was being introduced by Senora de Espaillat.

Senator Claude Pepper and Mrs. Pepper, looking demure in a new black straw cloche type hat, were there and Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould brought along her guest from New York and Newport, good-looking Mrs. Roswell Colt.

Mme. Vladimir Rybar knew practically everyone there, so did Mrs. Parker West, Admiral and Mrs. W. O. Spears and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck who had been to Dorothy Thompson's lecture on the Chinese situation, and was singing praises of the speaker.

Threesome on a sofa—Mrs. Eldon Paul King, Mrs. W. D, Whittemore and Mrs. Charles McEnerney. Family trio were Representative and Mrs. L. Donald Jackson, and Mrs. Jackson's niece, Miss Sally Shoemaker.

To name others without benefit of protocol were Senora de Dillion, wife of the Ecuador Ambasador; Admiral Clark Woodward; Anis Azer, Minister of Egypt; blonde Fay Lewishon and the former French Premier and Mme. Chautemps.

Then—Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Paul Daniels, whose husband is American Representative to the Pan American Union, with young Dr. Fernando Sacasa in tow; Comdr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo, and their daughter, Jane, being followed by a beau; Senora de Lequerica, wife of the Spanish Ambassador-at-large; Ray Muir, Assistant Chief of Protocol and Mrs. George V. Allen, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State.

And—oh yes! I almost forgot: Representative and Mrs. Aime Forand, were there, also Adelina Copello, whose late father was Dominican Ambassador; Mr. and Mrs. James Souby, Mr. and Mrs. Harland Crowell, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Juan Bautista de Lavalle, Peruvian Ambassador to the Pan American Union, and Dr. William Manager, assistant director of the same organization, accompanied by Mrs. Manger.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mountain Woman Whose Schooling Stopped in Seventh Grade Can't Understand Why College Student Finds This Column Difficult Reading

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want to answer the college student who thinks your language is keyed too high for the ordinary person to understand, especially if he (or she) hasn't finished grade school or high school.

He says the professors and students of psychology at his university indorse your advice about 95 per cent of the time; but at times, he says, they have to study some of your paragraphs very carefully to get the exact meaning.

I think it is terrible if such highly educated people can't understand what you write. If they are so dumb, I think they should go back to grade school and start over. Don't you agree?

I only went through free school, way up in the mountains, and the seventh grade was as high as they taught us. But believe it or not, I read all your pieces in the paper and can understand them all just fine. I think you do a grand job. But what I can't understand is why anybody in a university can't see what you mean. All my friends read your column, and none of us has been to high school. Please print this for V. F. to read. J. G.

Many Seek Learning Via Their Newspaper

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having read your reply to the college student who criticized your vocabulary and style, I would like to remind him that formal education alone doesn't give its very fortunate recipient a monopoly on the ability to understand thoughtful writing.

Many people, like myself, receive most of their education from the newspaper; and too many pseudo-intellectuals feel that the general public must be spoken to as children. Please, Mary, continue your fine articles as you were, and never treat us as if we couldn't pass an entrance exam to kindergarten.

I am a young wife and mother, very happy and contented, and sometimes I forget that others have heartaches and problems; yet I must be aware of such things if I am to give my children a better preparation for life than I had. That's why I value your column,—it keeps me closer to life; and it is as much a part of my day as breakfast. R. D.

Dad Studies Column, Then the Dictionary

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Like the college student, I too am concerned about your terminology, not for myself but because of my parents, who read your column daily.

They have been married 24 years and they married at a very young age, so that I grew up with them, more or less, as I am now 22. I have seen their many emotional conflicts and trials; and in recent months my father has changed completely.

He is considerate to mother, loving and trying earnestly to overcome a case of jealousy. Their lives have been completely changed and they are very happy. You have a great power in your hands, so please use it to help the common man.

My father sits with a dictionary as he goes through your column. Don't get me wrong, he isn't stupid; but his vocabulary definitely doesn't equal yours. C. B.

Our Preference in Dictionaries

DEAR READERS: I've had a large, lively mail on the subject of style,—or, as one commentator said, on my "precision-use of English." At present count, the majority vote is favorable, for which I am grateful, in view of the saying, true of writers, "The style is the man."

I've chosen the above letters for publication because they speak for the plain people and confirm my belief in their native intelligence and basic hunger for adult reading matter. Now, aside to C. B., may I say: I'm delighted, not chagrined, to hear your father uses the dictionary, to improve his grasp of new ideas. That's real progress—because in the final analysis, people grow by their own efforts, as he is doing. And to all who need a good dictionary I recommend Webster's Collegiate, Fifth Edition. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

"Wait Until Father Comes Home!"

Exasperated mothers through the years have used Papa as a threat to disobedient or otherwise rambunctious children. Sometimes the threat has been an idle one; at other times he is supposed to dispense punishment that is more impressive than that which Mother can give.

Though one can admit that mothers often may be at their wit's end with a number of lively children at their heels, there is a real question whether the "wait until your father comes home" approach is desirable.

First of all, especially with young children, discipline so far removed in time from the situation which seemed to call for it is not likely to be effective. More often than not the youngsters will feel that it is unfair. Then, too, Dad becomes merely a tool—a kind of spanking machine or a blind giver of "justice."

Most important of all, perhaps, is the fact that to make of him a threat may very well develop a kind of fear and dislike on the part of the children that is anything but what we want them to feel for their fathers.

How to Get Wax Off Furniture

How does one remove old wax from maple furniture if one wishes to apply a new coat?
M. A. L.

Place liquid cleaning and polishing wax on a soft cloth and rub the furniture with it. As the cloth becomes soiled, change to a clean spot. The liquid wax will soften the old coat of wax and remove it with the soil which has become embedded in it.

Years ago, I used to hollow out potatoes, stuff them with little link sausages and bake. The potatoes were a red brown and the dish was delicious. I tried it during the war and the potatoes did not brown, sausage was tough. Does anyone know whether this was due to the quality of sausage or was it cooked at the wrong temperature? Also, I do not recall whether it should have been covered while baking. A. M.

To be tender, well-cooked, and deliciously flavored all the way through, this dish should be baked in a covered pan. Put the sausages (or frankfurters) stuffed potatoes in a covered container, bake at 350 degrees F. until both are tender. If you wish, you can remove the cover during the last 10 minutes of the baking to brown.

Recently, several drops of a brown dressing for soles of shoes were spilled on my light blue broadloom rug. Do you know of anything that will remove them?
M. C. G.

Try working a little lard or colorless vaseline into the stain to soften it and then sponge it lightly with a cloth moistened with carbon tetrachloride. Use a motion which picks up the stain as it is dislodged instead of pushing it further into the rug. If this doesn't do the trick, allow the area to dry completely and dust sodium perborate into the rug. Sodium perborate is a bleach which is safe to use on wool, but be sure to test the effect of it on the rug color at an inconspicuous spot before applying to the stain. Before dusting in the perborate, dampen the stain with clean water to help hasten the action.

Do you have a satisfactory way to corn beef on a small scale? E. B.

I'm sorry I do not. Can any reader help E. B.?

I have some curtains I used on my boat last summer and they have some mildew on them. I wonder if you could tell me what to do to remove it or if it will come out. I washed them and the mildew did not disappear.
A. F. S.

Since mildew is a fungus which actually attacks the fibers, it may not be possible to remove it completely. However, it these are white curtains, try using a household bleach to remove the mildew. If the curtains are colored, I suggest you stretch the stained portion over a bowl of water and drop a solution of one part household bleach to one one part water onto the stain. Dip it into the water to stop the action of the bleach on the color after it has remained on the stain only a moment or so. If you see some improvement, repeat.

I have a mirror that has become splotchy and cloudy. Is it possible to resilver it at home? If so, will you give the proper instructions? J. C.

It is not possible to resilver mirrors at home because special equipment is required and, besides, the materials are not readily obtainable in small quantities. It can be done quite inexpensively by firms listed under "Mirrors" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

I have a stainless steel spatula which was quite tarnished when I used it once to scoop up poached eggs from water which had vinegar in it. Experimentally, I tried to clean it by boiling it in water with cream of tartar and found it became covered with a coat of soot-like matter which I cannot fully remove, even with steel wool and soap. Can you suggest how I might rehabilitate the spatula?
A. W.

If the steel in the spatula is a genuine stainless steel it should not have discolored in contact with acids. Cream of tartar is an acid just as vinegar is and so, as you found, using it just increased the stain. Did you try dusting the blade with a scratchless scouring powder before rubbing it with steel wool? If this doesn't move the stain, I'm afraid it is there to stay.

Do you know the process for bronzing baby shoes? I should enjoy doing my baby's shoes myself. A. A.

Because special equipment and materials are required for this work, it cannot be done successfully at home.

A kind of mildew or mold is ruining the wallpaper in the corners of my house. I can't imagine what causes it, since it never appeared until about two months ago. It gets worse and worse and is spreading alarmingly. I've tried soap and water, but it grows right back in larger quantities and the paper is faded and streaked from the black mold and the constant washing operation. Is there anything I can do to remove this mildew and stop its recurrence? It is not an old house and is in good condition, so I cannot conceive how water or dampness can get into the corners. The outer walls are brick, the windows are weather stripped, the attic insulated. We do not have steam heat and we do not keep the temperature high enough to cause very much humidity. Have you any suggestions? E.P.D.

Without doubt, a leak has developed in your roof or in the metal flashings which are strips of sheet metal used to close the gaps between roofing and formers, around chimneys, vent pipes, etc. These leaks develop sometimes as a result of settling of the house and many times are not directly under the place the moisture comes through the wall. As a matter of fact, sometimes the moisture will travel for 8 to 10 feet before soaking through. So, my best suggestion is for you to ask an experienced roofing man to check your roof for leaks.

If a check of the roof should reveal no leaks, there is a possibility the moisture could be coming from leaky connections or joints in water pipes in the wall. If the damaged corners are in sections of the wall where pipes are known to be, this angle should also be investigated.

There is no way to remove the mildew and wallpaper discoloration. When the cause has been corrected, repapering is the only answer.

I have a pair of silver finish lamps and in places the silver is wearing off and black spots show through. Is there any way that I can refinish them at home?
A. A.

The only way these lamps can be refinished is to have them plated commercially I know of no home process which could be used successfully.

PETUNIA!

I starve, while a tray full
Of canapes passes
I can't see a thing
Thru the steam on my glasses

Do this, Petunia! Moisten your finger-tips, rub them over a soap cake, then rub both sides of your lenses and polish as usual . . . and you'll find your glasses won't get steamy.

Modern Mother Has Fun With Baby

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The young mother of today has an easier time getting acquainted with her new baby than the mother who had to worry about establishing it on a schedule.

Today she can treat her baby in a more natural manner. She can feed it when it is hungry. She can pick it up and love and soothe it when it is crying. She can let it sleep as long as it will, when it will, certain that eventually it will work out a schedule that will be as satisfactory to her as it is to the baby.

If the baby is being nursed (and this is the ideal way of feeding for a baby on a self-demand schedule), then there should be little or no trouble. If he nurses often then this promotes a better supply of breast milk, and with better nourishment the baby is more contented and tends to sleep longer and longer hours between nursings.

The bottle-fed baby makes for more complex problems. First of all, the formula has to be adapted to his own digestion. It may have to be changed several times before the baby is happy and contented with it.

Meanwhile, the mother does not know whether the baby is crying because it is hungry, or whether its cries arise from indigestion and pain. This is a confused and worrisome situation when a mother is so unacquainted with the ways of her new treasure.

Also, she hasn't an unlimited number of bottles at hand and if the baby eats far oftener than expected she is apt to run out of them before time to prepare the next formula. Some mothers have managed this by preparing enough bottles for 36 hours (this makes it easy to figure the formula), and then when she is down to the last two bottles she can prepare another "batch" of them.

It is certain that whether breast or bottle-fed, if the baby's food is satisfying to him then any irregularity of feeding the first few weeks will adjust itself. The rhythms of a baby's hunger and sleeping are regular and if all goes well he will soon be eating only five or six times a day or even only four or five before he is six weeks old.

The mistake an unknowing mother makes with self-demand feedings is to interpret a baby's every cry as one of hunger. She should try walking, rocking or just holding him when he cries to be sure that these will not be sufficient to sooth him, before she concludes that he is hungry and must be fed.

'Trained Nurses'

Baby Sitting Is Becoming A Profession

Here's good news for parents! Baby-sitters are being taken out of the hit-or-miss category and they are now going to school. An enterprising psychologist, Gladys Romanoff, says the Woman's Home Companion, has initiated a baby-sitting training course in New York which is being copied by many cities across the United States.

In this course, Mrs. Romanoff gives teen-age baby-sitters straight-from-the-shoulder advice about how to handle their young charges. One of the first things sitters learn is to insist on a warming up period with the child before the mother leaves. This gives the child a chance to size-up the stranger who is to stay with him and it makes a happier situation for all concerned. In Mrs. Romanoff's course, baby-sitters are trained in the emotional as well as physcial care of children. Students learn how children develop at different age levels, and how they should never be pushed into an activity for which they are not ready. Handling family pets also comes up for discussion in this baby-sitting course, says the Companion. Sitters are instructed in practical suggestions for day and night care of babies, as well as health aand safety measures for the older child. When the course is finished each graduate receives a certificate, but more important, says Mrs. Romanoff, is that this training helps future mothers become better parents.

TRY THIS UNUSUAL combination of pears and prunes to make a tempting dessert

Pie—The Family's Favorite Dessert

HERE'S a delicious pie made with the currently plentiful pears and dried fruit. It's good served warm or cold, as dessert or for refreshments.

Pear Pie

½ pound cooked prunes
4 to 6 pears
½ to 2/3 cup pear juice
½ to 2/3 cup prune juice
½ to 2/3 cup sugar
Juice of 1 lemon
2 to 3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons margarine
1 stick cinnamon
About 6 whole cloves
Pie crust

Pit the prunes. Peel the pears and cook until tender in water. Mix the juices, sugar, flour and margarine. Boil with the spices until slightly thick. Remove the spices from the syrup. Arrange the fruit in an unbaked pie shell. Pour the syrup over the fruit. Place the pastry strips in crisscross fashion over the top. Sprinkle with sugar and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees to 450 degrees Fahrenheit) for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to a moderate oven (350 degrees to 375 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake about 20 minutes longer.

If you have never tasted chocolate pastry, you have a treat in store for you in this "Chocolate-Crust Peach Chiffon Pie."

Chocolate-Crust Peach Chiffon Pie

Chocolate Pastry: 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour, 3 tablespoons cocoa, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1/3 cup shortening, Cold water (approximately 3 tablespoons)

Filling: ¾ cup milk, 3 eggs, ½ cup granulated sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 envelope (1 tablespoon) plain gelatin, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon cold water, 6 to 8 canned cling peach halves

Chocolate Pastry: Sift together flour, cocoa, sugar and salt. Blend in shortening. Sprinkle water onto dry mixture sparingly, adding just enough to make stiff dough. Roll to fit 9-inch pie pan. (Pastry is tender and must be handled carefully to avoid breaking.) Prick with fork and bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 15 minutes. Cool.

Filling: Scald milk. Beat egg yolks with ¼ cup sugar and salt. Add to hot milk, and cook and stir over hot water until slightly thickened. Remove from heat, add gelatin softened in lemon juice and water, and stir to dissolve gelatin. Mash or sieve drained peaches to make 1 cup pulp, reserving remainder for garnish. Stir peach pulp into custard mixture. Cool until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites until stiff and gradually beat in remaining sugar. Fold into custard-peach mixture. Pour into cooled shell. Slice remaining peaches over top for garnish. Chill until firm.

Depression Baby is A Giant

Telephone Answering Services Are a Big, Valuable Industry

By Adelaide Kerr

Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

New York, Feb. 27.—The telephone shrilled in the brai nspecialist's empty office on a hot Sunday afternoon—and a swift chain of events began.

The surgeon was yachting off the swank Connecticut shore. But a few hours later, thanks to the bell, a girl and some seagoing police, he was performing a delicate emergency operation.

That was just another incident among hundreds which pack drama into the switchboards of telephone-answering services. When the doctor did not answer his phone, an operator for the service to which he was a subscriber took the call and got the details about a severely injured accident victim. She had the police dispatch a patrol boat to bring him ashore.

At other times answering service operators have routed insurance agents out of bed at night to handle accidents. They have located mothers in movies when a crisis developed at home and have taken orders for thousands of dollars worth of goods. One even produced bail for a client after he celebrated New Year's Eve too well.

The telephone answering business is a twentieth century plant, which sprouted more than 25 years ago and bloomed voluminously with the depression. Small businesses found the service cheaper than an office girl.

Today it is a national industry with country-wide ramifications and big business clients. Telephone-answering businesses in 80 large cities of the United States are linked in the Associated Telephone Exchange founded in 1942. Only one such business in a city may become a member.

From 3 to 80 members can work in the network to serve such big business clients as steel corporations, air lines, cable, radio and manufacturing companies, the American Red Cross and the Book of the Month Club.

Firm's Service Improved

Fifteen members worked for several months for an airline company which was swamped with incoming telephone calls. Their daily reports caused the company to make shifts in personnel which eventually reduced the time elapsing between a ring in its offices and an answer, from 15 minutes to a few seconds.

The 80-city association sometimes has to handle personal problems too. One rich Westerner (not a client) quarreled with his wife, came to New York, drank too much and became bent on suicide. But before he pulled the trigger he telephoned the wife of an old friend back home. She called her husband's telephone exchange. It called the New York member, who called the visitor's hotel manager, who raced to the room of the Westerner, who was so furious at being interrupted that he forgot his intent and slept it off instead.

New York, with more than two dozen telephone-answering services, probably has the largest operation of the kind in the country. But its big operation is reflected on a smaller scale in many other cities.

Biggest bulk of New York's business is done by two companies giving 24-hour service. One is Telephone Exchange and Doctors' Exchange (single ownership) operating 19 offices in Manhattan and the Bronx. (It is a member of the Associated Telephone Exchange.) The other is Telanserphone, Inc., operating 15 offices in Manhattan and others in four outside cities. The rest range all the way down the line to one-switchboard operations giving eight-hour service.

Speedy, Efficient Service

The biggest answering service offices have long lines of switchboards manned by operators drilled to swift efficiency and all-out service. Their switchboards are linked to the nearest telephone central office by off-premises extensions.

When the clinent's telephone rings, his light automatically flashes on the telephone-answering switchboard. If he does not answer the third ring, the operator does, one hand flying over a maze of twinkling lights, the other noting messages on a pad. Many operators work surrounded by elaborate card-file information on their clients at their elbows, with colored rings to hook around a light to show "urgent message," and other paraphernalia.

Many New York clients are doctors, artists and writers. But the bulk of the clientele is small businesses — insurance companies, plumbers, refrigeration services, window cleaners, undertakers, sign painters, window letterers, interior decorators, air conditioning concerns. Telephone Exchange operates a radio talent service through which producers and directors casting new shows can reach actors they want to try out. Doctors' Exchange recently launched a two-way radio service for doctors and ambulance services.

New projects are in the air. Telephone, Inc., awaits license to launch service on a completed one-way radio with a 25-mile range, small and light enough to carry in a coat pocket. These were designed primarily for doctors, but can be adapted to many services. After they are in operation the company plans to rent them at railway stations to businessmen who come to New York for the day.

Teaching the Child to Wash

It's easier to teach small children to wash than to dress themselves, for they love to play in the water. The task here is not so much to develop your child's interest as to transfer his delight from mere dabbling in water to getting his face and hands clean. Supervision of the "washing-up hour" will be necessary until he's about 4 years old, says the child care and training department of Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

The first step in teaching your child to wash is to set up washing arrangements a small youngster can use without your help. Provide a low bench, wash basin and low mirror in the kitchen. Or put a box or steps in the bathroom, on which he can climb up to the lavatory. Place a mirror where he can see himself as he makes his toilet. Have hooks he can reach for his washcloth, towel, comb and toothbrush. In the early stages, it's a good idea to have these articles on strings or chains to help him return them to the proper hook.

The parent's emphasis should be on the child's finishing the job speedily and effectively. Let him have water now and then to play in as part of his play equipment. Stress that washing-up times are business. Your standard of cleanliness must not be too high at first. You can polish him off in the daily bath. As far as the child's own efforts are concerned, independence is more important than removing all the high water marks—and will be for some time to come.

Lend Ease:

Sickroom Loan Closet Proves a Boon

The corner drugstore supplies the small inexpensive items a sickroom requires—medicines, toiletries, disinfectants—but what about the big and costly necessities.

Frequently when a person is ill at home, he needs a hospital bed, a wheel chair or crutches, but these things are generally too expensive for the average family budget. Here is the way one community solved this problem, according to the Woman's Home Companion.

For the past eight years a Maryland woman's club has been lending—without charge—all sorts of sickroom articles to anyone in the community who needs them. This sickroom loan closet operates like a circulating library and in all of the time it has been operating only once has an article not been returned.

The collection started with sheets, pillowcases, a pair of crutches and two wheel chairs contributed by members of the club. Even strangers who have only heard about the project now contribute sickroom items until there are well over a hundred articles in the collection.

The club keeps a simple file of "ins" and "outs" and after six or eight weeks they call to check on the use of any articles not returned. The club originally intended the loan closet as a neighborly service in its own community. But as its work has become known, request for aid and information come from a widening area.

Conference

A conference is a meeting to . . . Discuss and to decide . . . If something should be acted on . . . Or gently laid aside . . . It may be so important that . . . It will affect the fate . . . Of government and human life . . . In nations small or great . . . Or it may be waste of time . . . Where people sit around . . . With no precise objective and . . . . No wisdom to expound . . . Where all they do is ramble on . . . And let the hours pass . . . While smoke and idle talk unite . . . To form a useless gas . . . A conference takes our temperature . . . And feels our mental pulse . . . But it has no significance . . . Unless it gets results.

More About Our Local Liquor "Laws"

Inasmuch as there's a lot of talk around town about legalizing stand-up drinking, I'd like to get my 2 cents into the argument.

It is common belief here that one may not drink standing up, and that a patron may not move his drink to another table. Tavern keepers say "it's the law" that drinkers must remain seated, and that drinks may only be moved by paid servers.

There is no legal basis for either practice, any more than there is for the one I cited a few days ago—"you can't consume your own bottled liquor on premises licensed to sell liquor by the glass." These are customs, not laws.

On February 14 I asked the Corporation Counsel and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to cite any law which might prohibit stand-up drinking, or the movement of drinks by a patron.

To date, the Corporation Counsel has declined to answer.

The ABC Board cited the applicable law. It merely states that such beverages must be served to persons seated at tables.

It says nothing about the manner in which such drinks may be consumed. And the ABC Board has made no "regulations" regarding this section of the act which could be construed as a prohibition against standing up while you drink.

But in spite of all that, a fellow who gets up with his glass in his hand to propose a toast is likely to find himself being given the bum's rush by the hired hands. "It's illegal," they'll assure you.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

How come they tell us to start the day on the right foot but in the Army they start with the left foot? My daddy says you can answer my question.

Howard Drayson
404 Newcomb st. se.

Dear Howard:

Of course I can. But your Daddy explains it so much better, that I think you'd better ask him.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Washington housewives must be starting their spring cleaning early this year. That's the only way I can account for the flurry of invalid streetcar tokens which arrived yesterday for Children's Hospital. They came from:

Mrs. John W. Mann, 7006 Arlington rd., Bethesda, Md.; Richard T. Mann, 815 Maryland ave. ne.; Mrs. Joseph Tampico, 8705 Sundale dr., Silver Spring, Md.; the folks at 804 Prince st., Alexandria, Va.; Nettie G. Schuman, 5809 14th st. nw., and Anna Louise Moore, 3325 Cleveland ave. nw.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

Dan P. Van Gorder of 120 11th st. ne., sends along a howler from a Gettysburg (Pa.) paper. It states:

"Mr. and Mrs. Soandso have named their eighth sin Philbert."

Comments District Liner Van Gorder: "Even President Truman couldn't be any more blunt."

WHY DON'T THEY?

Why don't they identify taxicabs on the inside, as they do on the outside?

Most folks who forget to take all their belongings along when they leave a cab can't remember what hacker they were riding with. The usual reaction is:

"When I was getting the cab, I was more concerned with flagging him down than noticing what company it was. While I was riding, I saw no clew as to the company's identity. And, of course, when I got out, I had no further interest in the cab—until I remembered that I left my briefcase in it."

PERSONAL NOTES

I. M. Day, jr., 414 Whitestone rd., Silver Spring, Md.: The man who "reads my copy" let it go through without changing it. He wanted to see how many others would catch the incongruity. He now has his answer. You're the only one who noted that a boy with mumps shouldn't be described as "greeting the news with a long face."

NICE QUIET PLACE TO EAT

So the juke box annoys you, eh? The television set bothers you, huh?

Be like me—I eat in a place where both are permitted to run simultaneously.

They drown each other out. It's wonderful.

NEW YORK.—The ANTA show, for the American National Theater and Academy, at the Ziegfeld Theater next Sunday, will be the most unusual event of the show-business year. The top-ranking actors and actresses will perform in scenes from their most memorable hits. The orchestra seats for this benefit show are priced at $20, $50 and $100 . . . The first time such a high-priced show was presented in New York was for the benefit of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It was arranged by Minnie Maddern Fiske. And when Kate Springly saw the price of the tickets she said: "It would be cheaper to take home a horse and be kind to it."

This week a lifer named McAllister brought suit for his release on the ground that in 1918 he was convicted illegally, because he hadn't been advised then of his right to be represented by counsel. The voiding of this conviction would alter his status as a fourth offender, for which a life sentence is mandatory, and he'd be entitled to freedom. Only two people involved in that 1918 case are still alive and remember the details. The first is the man who prosecuted it—now Judge Albert Cohn of the Appellate Division; the second is the felon himself. "At least," Judge Cohn told friends, "it will be determined whose word is more credible—a judge's or a felon's." This week County Judge Joseph freed the felon.

David Smart, publisher of Coronet magazine, will challenge the foreign coverage of Readers Digest by appointing nine roving correspondents all over the world . . . Thornton Wilder returns from Europe March 1, with the completed manuscript of his new play . . . C. V. Whitney, who has just been appointed Undersecretary of Commerce, once was introduced to Prince Mike Romanoff, in the days when Romanoff was the darling of the New York nightlifers. "Mr. Whitney?" Which one? There are so many." Romanoff asked, and was told, "Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney." Romanoff turned away haughtily and shrugged: "Oh, the WRONG Whitney."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Vaughan Called Hard to Dislike

By Drew Pearson

Quite a few people have written or wired me asking what manner of man is the famous Gen. Harry Vaughan in whose defense President Truman hurled the abbreviation for an unprintable name last week.

Vaughan

The answer is that Vaughan is a roly-poly, easy going, sometimes blustery sort of person, who is very difficult to dislike, even if you don't appreciate his particular brand of humor—which the President does. In fact, it is largely because of Vaughan's role as court jester plus his shaggy-dog loyalty, that the President has him around.

Nobody can blame the President for wanting a little relaxation—and if he enjoys the type of humor dished out by Harry Vaughan, then that gentleman may serve a useful purpose and might be immune from newspaper comment. However, since he also plays a part in influencing our foreign relations, and since some 1,600,000 American boys in the armed forces must salute the uniform of a major general, then it should be within the bounds of fair comment to scrutinize more closely Vaughan's earlier experience and present career.

Vaughan in Australia

Five years before Harry Truman became Vice President, Harry Vaughan was a Missouri manufacturer's representative for the Hines Co. of Milwaukee, the T. J. Moss Tie Co., and the Heim Binder Co., also of Milwaukee. Salary, $4200.

Then, in 1939, Vaughan came to work for Senator Truman as secretary. Came the war and Truman hit the headlines as head of the Truman Committee. Vaughan secured a commission as lieutenant colonel, went to Australia where he served as provost marshal at Brisbane. He didn't get along too well with General MacArthur and came home.

A photograph is in existence taken of Colonel Vaughan in Australia with two other colonels, all obviously inebriated, over the caption "Three Full Colonels."

Back in Washington, the Army, always astute regarding Capitol Hill contacts, assigned Colonel Vaughan to be liaison officer with his old boss, the Senator from Missouri. Truman, by that time, had become the most powerful Senator on the Hill, with the power to investigate the Army, Navy or anything else.

Came Truman's election as Vice President and Harry Vaughan became his military aide. It was the first time in history that a Vice President ever had a military aide, but Truman wanted it, so the Army was delighted to please the man who might some day be in the White House.

Monkey Wrenches

Nobody would begrudge General Vaughan his seat at the right hand of the President, his medals, his limousine, his titles, his flunkeys, or his $12,000 salary, if it were not for the fact that the general is not satisfied to remain a court jester. He insists on poking his hand into the delicate machinery of government.

And whenever he does so, he nearly always inserts a monkey wrench.

In 1946, for instance, as Europe faced bleak starvation, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson asked the American public to forego liquor in favor of bread. The grain allocation for distillers and brewers was cut. Some months later, as hunger abroad increased, the grain allocation for distillers was cut again.

At this point, General Vaughan telephoned the Agriculture Department, got Anderson's assistant, Nathan Koenig, on the wire, and stormed:

"What do you mean changing the distillers' quota again without informing me? I'm the one you are to deal with on that. I had assurances that the quotas were not to be changed, and I want this order rescinded immediately."

Vaughan was so vituperative that Koenig got Secretary Anderson, then out of town, on the long-distance phone, and recommended that the cut for distillers be rescinded. General Vaughan, Koenig warned his chief, was in no mood to be trifled with.

"Tell the General," replied Anderson, "that he was not confirmed by the Senate to act as Secretary of Agriculture."

Woos Negro Votes

During the recent election campaign, Vaughan was kept pretty well out of sight. Truman realized that a bemedaled general constantly at his right hand would not go down well with the voters—especially when he was preaching peace. So the general was kept in the background.

However, this did not prevent him from putting in his political oar—and sometimes rocking the boat.

To win Negro votes, he conceived the idea of sending the famous Negro aviator, "Colonel" Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, once Emperor Haile Selassie's one-man Ethiopian air corps, to Europe to inspect Negro troops.

Arriving in Europe with an advance build-up by Vaughan, "Colonel" Julian toured the entire American zone of Germany as the guest of the Army, was given a military aide and spent an hour with General Clay—one of the busiest men in the world.

Then it was discovered that Julian was using the prestige given him by the White House military aide to promote a cigarette deal which would have netted Julian and friends about five million dollars.

All of which caused General Clay to send the Black Eagle eagling back to his sponsor, Harry Vaughan, who had lacked the sense to realize that Mr. Truman's civil-rights program was sure to carry the Negro vote, regardless of "Colonel" Julian or anyone else.

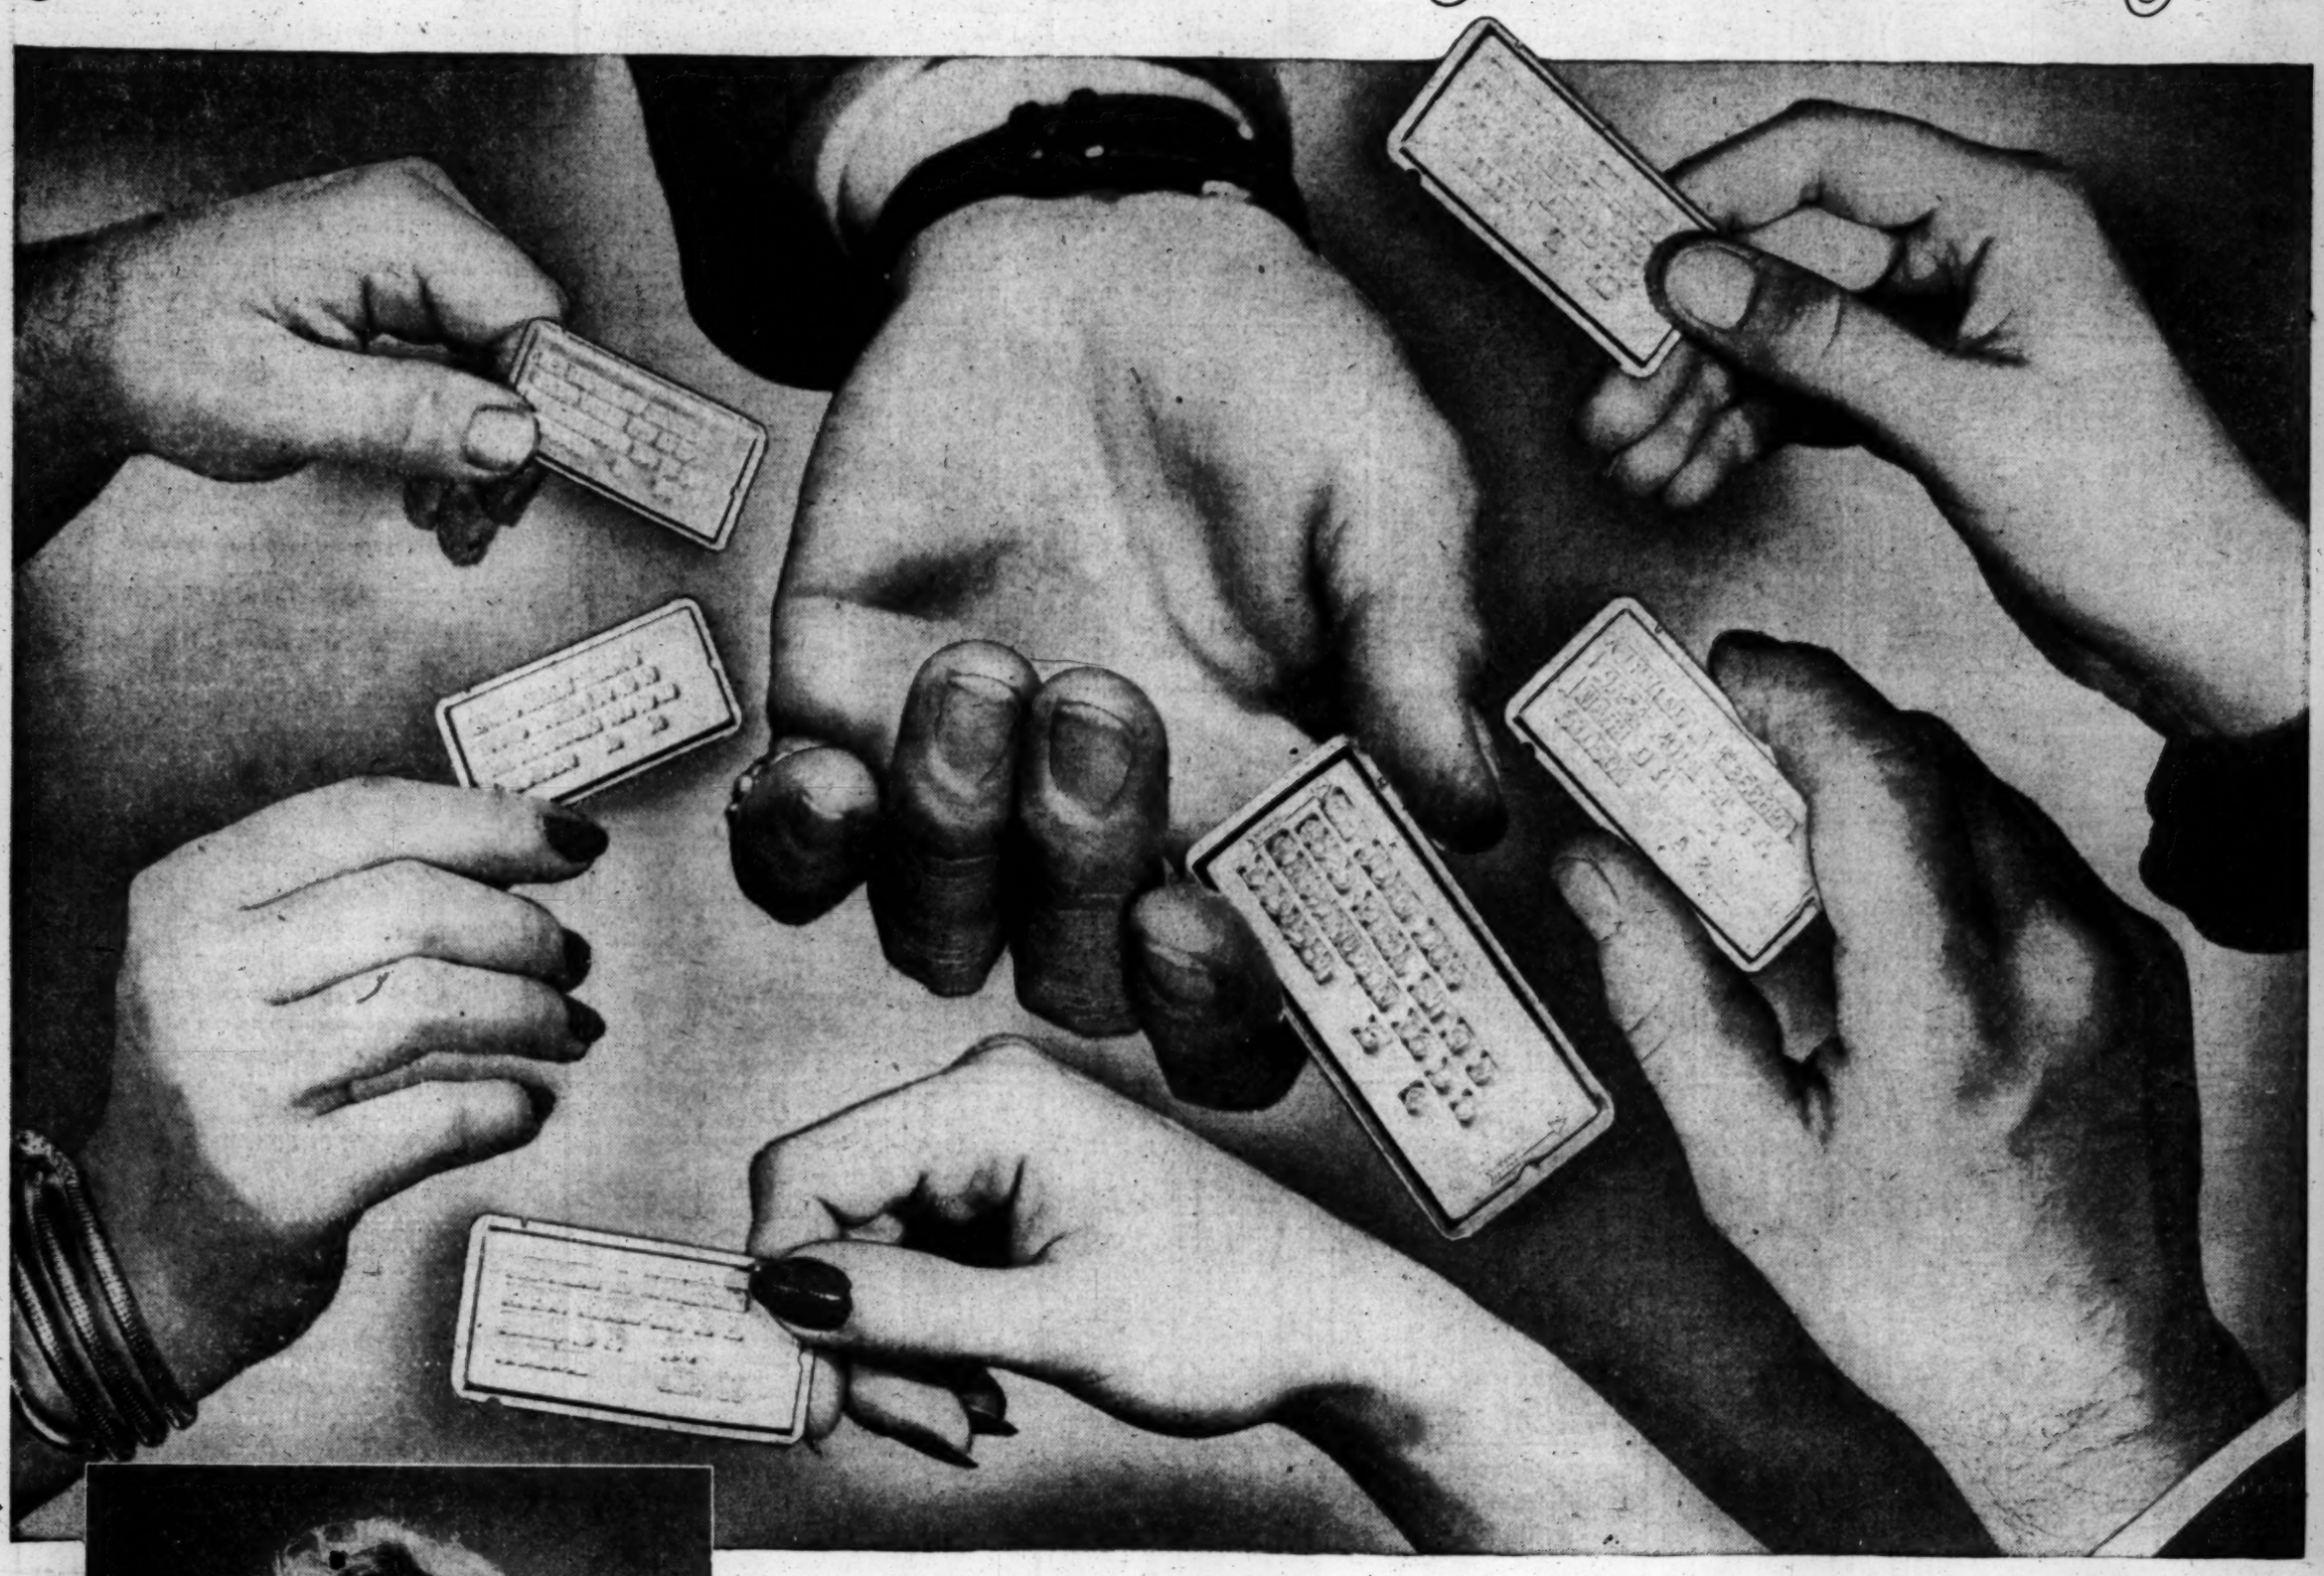
Number 5 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



LUCY STOCKMAN made her way to Washington from Roanoke, Va., back in 1915. Four years later she started her career with The Hecht Co. as a messenger in the Accounting Division. Lucy practically grew up with the store so that in her 30 years of service she held almost every job there was in the Accounting Department . . . cashier . . . collections . . . adjustments right on up to Manager of Charga-Plate Accounts. To the 53 people working in her department, Lucy is tops, not only in title . . . but as a person.

These are "my charges" . . .

SAYS LUCY STOCKMAN, MANAGER OF CHARGA-PLATE* ACCOUNTS, THE HECHT CO.

Once upon a time only the privileged few could walk into a large department store and say "Charge it." As a result, credit departments were small. Today, thousands of customers who walk into The Hecht Co. have our exclusive Charga-Plates like those pictured above . . . and what's more . . . that's all the identification they need to make a charge purchase. Being the girl in charge of charges . . . may sound like the punch line of a gag . . . but that's Lucy's job. She has the responsibility of handling over 200,000 charge account records. She and her stalwart crew of 53 associates go into action each time a charge purchase is made . . . a simple procedure for one customer . . . but when it comes to hundreds of thousands . . . it's quite a job. In an average month there are over 500,000 separate entries made for Hecht Co. charge customers. A half million entries from a half million sales checks. And, every Hecht Co. charge customer receives the original sales checks of all purchases made each month. Mrs. Stockman's department is a far cry from the celluloid cuffs . . . green eye shade days of double entry bookkeeping. There are automatic and semi-automatic gadgets to total bills . . . to photograph them . . . to stuff them into envelopes . . . yes, even one that ties them in bundles and drops them in the mail. Here again the procedure sounds quite simple, but in an average month Lucy's office handles over 350,000 pieces of mail . . . more than many a Post Office. Lucy believes the Charga-Plate is the greatest innovation retail business has offered the buying public in years . . . as a means of speedy identification . . . as the key to leisurely shopping. Why? . . . because a customer doesn't have to write out her name and address . . . and the imprinted information helps Lucy and her staff do all the paper work after a customer says, "Charge it!"
